

RIVERS URGES FIGHT ON 'TOBACCO TRUST', NAMES 3 TO FLY TO CAPITAL PARLEY TODAY

LENDING MEASURE MAY BE DROPPED BY NEW DEALERS

Adjournment Would Halt Party Uprising; Contest Over Housing Looms in the Lower Chamber.

WASHINGTON, July 30. (AP)—The most rebellious congress of President Roosevelt's years in the White House entered what may be the last week of its seven-month session today with two major administration bills teetering between success and failure and a variety of others already tumbled by the wayside.

Plans of the leadership called for a steady drive toward adjournment by next Saturday, but both the senate and house had yet to act upon the multi-million dollar lending program and a contest was in prospect in the house over the $800,000,000 housing bill, already approved by the senate.

In addition to these, it was possible that the house would vote on amending the wage-hour act to exempt various groups of workers, although senate consideration of that subject this session appeared remote.

Security Amendments.
There was a seemingly slim chance, too, that amendments broadening the scope, liberalizing some of the benefits and revising the tax schedule of the social security act would be cleared by congress.

The differing house and senate amendments in this field are before a deadlocked conference committee which meets Tuesday. Among the proposals caught in this deadlock is one to postpone for three years the increase now scheduled next January 1 in taxes on employers and employees for the old-age pension system.

In the meantime, political Washington will watch closely tomorrow to see what adjournment signal to congress may come out of the President's weekly conference with Democratic legislative leaders.

There is more interest in this question, in and out of congress, than there is even in what decision Mr. Roosevelt may have reached during his week-end fishing cruise as to signing, or vetoing, the Hatch bill against political activities by most federal employees.

Harmony Resolution.
Although some persons speculated that the President's house and senate leaders might advise him to abandon the remainder of his program, including the big lending bill, in favor of getting congress out of town quickly, Speaker Bankhead of the house told reporters that he for one had no intention of making such a recommendation.

The face-saving harmony resolution adopted by house Democratic caucus Friday night only served to emphasize the extent to

Ship Reaches Treasure on Ocean Floor

NORFOLK, Va., July 30.—(UP) The little Italian ship Falco has at last reached the vast treasure in silver bullion which lies at the bottom of the sea in the sunken steamer Merida, and may bring it to the surface soon, waterfront circles said tonight.

The information, based on radio messages from the salvage ship, 65 miles off the Virginia Capes, said the divers may begin bringing up the treasure tomorrow if there are no complicating accidents in the explosion-torn hulk of the Merida.

The superstructure of the vessel, which went to the bottom the calm but foggy night of May 11, 1911, when the Merida was rammed by the S. S. Admiral Farragut, hangs over the scene of operations on the ocean floor and divers said they feared it might collapse.

Passengers have been paid $500,000 by insurance companies for claims against valuables lost when the ship sank.

In addition to 22 tons of silver bullion and an estimated $50,000 in gold certificates, it was believed the Merida carried jewels the Emperor Maximilian, of Mexico, gave his Empress Carlotta before his assassination on the Hill of the Bells near Queretaro in 1867.

Should the Falco recover the crown jewels with the other treasure, it was not known what steps would be taken next. If the Falco returns to port with the treasure, all of it would have to be declared and Maximilian heirs in London have filed claims for the treasure.

There was a possibility the valuables might be impounded pending settlement.

Because of these developments, there also were reports the Falco would return here tomorrow for supplies and that the ship would pick up the treasure and continue to Italy without putting into port again.

Another possibility was that she might be refueled outside the port limits if she recovers the treasure tomorrow, and sail direct to her home port of Laspezia.

Munich Stations Fresh

Out of Gas—Army Blamed

MUNICH, Germany, July 30.—(P)—Gasoline stations ran out of fuel today for the heavy Sunday trade.

The reason? One operator said the army had bought up most of the fuel for military maneuvers which began about August 15.

But when she arrived, equipped with heavy woolen underwear and a winter coat, the temperature was 103. She came here to visit her sister, Mrs. Leah Koppel, 72, whom she had not seen for 42 years.

BRITISH-JAPANESE PARLEY IS FEARED NEAR BREAKDOWN

Difficulties Develop From Tokyo Demands London Support Nippon-Backed Currency in North China

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
The strain between Japan and Great Britain tightened yesterday both in diplomacy at Tokyo and on the Chinese field of struggle.

The Japanese campaign to drive out the British gathered headway in North China—with written warnings of death reported—and in London informed persons fear that the Tokyo negotiations over the Tientsin blockade were headed for a breakdown.

A crowd estimated at 15,000 demonstrated before the British embassy today (Monday) following two huge mass meetings in which speakers accused Great Britain of evading the spirit of her recent agreement on Japanese right-of-way in occupied portions of China. The embassy was guarded by a heavy cordon of police. No untoward incidents were reported.

Britons traveled to Tientsin from Tsinan and reported a committee had warned all British nationals there that their lives would not be safe after August 10.

Britons Ordered to Leave.
The Japanese press said all British missionaries had been ordered to leave Tsangchow, 50 miles south of Tientsin.

Thousands of new posters appeared in Peking denouncing the British, and police warned Chinese shops to rid their shelves of British goods.

High French quarters reported the receipt of a British proposal that a common "peace plan" be drawn up and submitted to the dictators as soon as Europe's security bloc is consolidated by the inclusion of Soviet Russia.

The reported plan for a durable peace would serve as a formula permitting the nations to reduce their armaments, demobilize reservists and get back to a peacetime economic and diplomatic footing.

The proposal, as reported in Paris, would offer Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini a share in raw materials providing they promise to abandon their policies of force and threat of force and agree to respect the "status quo" in Europe and Africa.

Mission Bombed.

The United States embassy at Chungking was informed that Japanese planes bombed the United Lutheran Mission hospital at Koshan, 150 miles north of Hankow, last Wednesday, killing or wounding eight Chinese.

Prime Minister Chamberlain prepared a comprehensive review of the international situation to give today as parliament starts its final week before recessing Friday.

Twelve thousand reserve sailors all over Britain left home to join the reserve fleet being mobilized for maneuvers along with the regulars next month.

Two conflicting viewpoints were presented by Georgia tobacco men last night as they conferred with Governor Rivers on tobacco prices on the porch of the Governor's mansion. Left to right, seated, are E. L. Anderson, of Statesboro; J. R. Walker, of Blackshear; Ivy L. Echols, of Patterson; Governor Rivers; R. G. Daniell, of Metter, and Representative J. H. Swindle, of Berrien county. Left to right, standing, are Joe Tillman, D. Rushing and Senator H. D. Brannen, all of Statesboro.

GIRL SWIMS IN FOG TO GET 33 SAVED

Her Screams Attract Tugboat to Rescue of Overturned Cabin Cruiser.

BRANFORD, Conn., July 30.—(UP)—Cynthia Chapin, 19-year-old Hartford girl, swam through fog and darkness in Long Island Sound early today to bring rescue to 33 men and women whose 32-foot cabin cruiser overturned a mile from shore.

Her screams, after she had swum a quarter-mile, brought the Tidewater Oil Company tugboat Cayuga to the rescue. The passengers, all wearing life preservers, were picked up in a short time and taken to New Haven. Only James Bone, 26, of Plandome, N. Y., needed treatment, for exposure.

Captain Arthur Doolittle, of the cruiser Starlight, said the passengers became unruly during the pleasure trip and he decided to return to Stony Creek. Many had climbed to the deckhouse, he said, and when ordered down they crowded on one side, causing the boat to tip over.

They clung to the cruiser while Doolittle found life preservers and helped them get them on.

RACHEL WEIZMANN DIES.

JERUSALEM, July 30.—(P)—Rachel Weizmann, 87, mother of Russian-born Dr. Chaim Weizmann, died today at Haifa. Her son is president of the Jewish Agency for Palestine here.

FHA Pares Maximum Rates On Insured Home Mortgages

New Financing Terms To Be Most Favorable 'Ever Available to Buyers of Houses on Nation-Wide Basis,' Says Administrator McDonald; Become Effective Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(P)—The Federal Housing Administration today announced a reduction in the maximum interest rates which it will permit on home financing mortgages insured by the government.

Officials said that, effective Tuesday, the maximum rate on insured mortgages covering small homes would be reduced from 5 to 4 1-2 per cent; and that the maximum on insured mortgages for large-scale rental projects would be cut from 4 1-2 to 4 per cent.

In a statement issued through his office here, Stewart McDonald, the FHA administrator, said the new financing terms would be the most favorable "ever available to home buyers on a nation-wide basis in the history of the country."

They would extend to the public, he added, "the benefits of generally lower interest rates now prevailing in the money market."

Jesse Jones, who as federal loan administrator, has supervision over the Housing Administration, joined in the announcement.

Keep Umbrella Handy—Showers Predicted

Partly cloudy, with a likelihood of thundershowers in the afternoon, is the weather outlook for Atlanta today, it was predicted at Candler airport weather office last night.

Temperatures are due to range between 70 and 85 degrees. Due to showers and a generally cloudy day, yesterday's temperatures were comparatively low, ranging from 69 to 68 degrees.

Bucket and Dipper Passe As Water Boys Go Modern

TAMPA, Fla., July 30.—(P)—Even the water boys are going modern and the old tin bucket and community dipper are out.

On the slum clearance project and other construction jobs in this section, water boys carry tanks with spigots strapped on their backs. And each workman has his own drinking cup.

Sweltering New York Preparing for Snow

NEW YORK, July 30.—(UP)—In time of drought prepare for snow. The city's department of purchase is inviting bids for rental of 4,000 privately-owned trucks to be used in removal of snow next winter.

KNOXVILLE SAFETY RECORD IS BROKEN

Auto Fatality Occurs on 108th Day as Atlanta Drivers Extend Mark.

Atlanta motorists forged ahead with their deathless traffic days record yesterday, extending the total to 64 days without a fatal accident, while Knoxville, Tenn., auto drivers saw their record snapped at the end of 108 days.

In Knoxville, the city which was leading the nation in total number of consecutive days without a traffic death, Mrs. Margaret Hagewood, 29, of Clinton, Tenn., was killed and her husband, Roy, and three children injured. It was Knoxville's eighth traffic fatality this year, and the first since April 12.

64 DAYS

Captain Jack Malcom, head of the police traffic bureau of the Atlanta department, last night expressed his sincere appreciation for the co-operation being accorded local authorities and safety directors in the campaign here.

He urged motorists to continue observing the 25-mile speed limit and to take no unnecessary chances while driving. It is the hope of Atlanta authorities that the city will surpass the record just recently established by Knoxville.

War Certain, But 3 or 4 Years Off, Dean Askev Declares on Return

It Will Come When Nazis Challenge British Trade, Educator Asserts.

By LEE ROGERS.

War in Europe will not come until Germany feels sufficiently strong to challenge British trade in the Far East, Dean J. Thomas Askev, of Armstrong Junior College, Savannah, declared yesterday on his return from a tour of the continent.

"At the present outlook that appears to be at least three or four years away," the political scientist predicted.

Dean Askev, long a student of British foreign policy and local government, had spent the last five months at the University of London, England, studying these topics, interviewing English government officials and traveling on the continent.

"The coming war, for war is certain to engulf the world sooner

Warm Springs Opens Hospital Today

The three-story medical building at the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, Warm Springs, Ga., which will be dedicated in informal exercises today. The building, which is constructed on sloping ground to give an additional floor level in the rear, is completely equipped with all modern appliances for the treatment of infantile paralysis. Work was started last September, funds being provided by the Foundation offices in New York city.

New Three-Story Unit Will Make Removal of Patients for Surgical Treatment Unnecessary.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., July 30. A three-story hospital which makes possible surgical treatment of infantile paralysis patients at the Warm Springs Foundation itself will be dedicated here tomorrow in an informal ceremony. Only officials and attaches of the Foundation will be in attendance.

The new unit, facing toward the rear of Georgia Hall, will obviate the necessity of performing necessary operations at distant points.

DR. CHARLES WARD, FORMER TEACHER AT EMORY, DIES

Retired Physician Also at One Time Connected
With Grady; Practiced
Medicine Here 35 Years.

Dr. Charles T. Ward, retired physician and a former instructor in medicine at Emory University, died yesterday morning at his home, 1001 Oakdale road, N. E. He was 69 years of age, and while he had been in failing health for several years, his death was unexpected.

Dr. Ward was born in Lincoln, Lincoln county, Ga., on February 20, 1870, the son of the late William Cleveland and Rosa Hayes Ward, but had made his home in Atlanta for the last 45 years.

He was educated at the Southern Medical school, now part of Emory University, and from 1896 to 1900 served as a member of the Emory faculty. He also served for a time at Grady hospital.

Dr. Ward practiced medicine in Atlanta for 35 years and was a member of the Fulton County Medical Society, until he resigned because of ill health. He was a member of Druid Hills Methodist church and the W. D. Luckie Lodge, F. & A. M.

Surviving are his wife, four

Twelve Are Injured In Forced Landing

CHICAGO, July 30.—(AP)—Eleven passengers and the pilot were injured today when a trimotored sightseeing plane crashed in making a forced landing on a rough prairie a mile north of the municipal airport.

Witnesses said the plane developed motor trouble shortly after taking off from the airport. After it descended, a wing struck the ground, dragging the plane in a circle and causing it to nose over.

Most seriously injured was the pilot, Gilbert Grimm, 33, of Chicago, who was taken unconscious to County hospital.

daughters, Miss Cynthia Ward, Miss Jane Ward, Miss Lela Ward and Miss Betty Ward, all of Atlanta; a son, Captain Charles T. Ward, medical corps, United States army, Brooklyn, N. Y.; two sisters, Mrs. Cliff Britt, of Little Falls, N. J., and Miss Lavilla Ward, of Madison, Wis., and a brother, Dr. B. H. H. Ward, of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the chapel of Harry G. Poole with Dr. Louis D. Newton and the Rev. Eugene C. Few officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

WELDON TO FETE PILOTS.

The Protective Order of Pilots will be entertained at a watermelon cutting at 7:30 o'clock tonight at Adair park as the guests of W. W. Weldon. Members and their families have been invited.

AUDREY ANDERSON DIES IN 43D YEAR

Services for Decatur Service Station Operator To Be Tomorrow.

Audrey L. Anderson, 42, well-known Decatur service station operator, died yesterday morning at his home, 117 Greenwood place, Decatur.

Mr. Anderson was the fourth member of his family to die within the last 18 months. He was the son of the late T. E. and Mrs. Lola Poole Anderson Galloway, and a brother of Poole Anderson, who died about four months ago.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Ruby Jones and Miss Garnet Anderson, both of Decatur.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Trinity chapel with Dr. D. P. McGeachy officiating. Burial will be in Decatur cemetery under the direction of A. S. Turner & Sons.

or later, will be a trade and land war, pure and simple. There will be no fight to save democracy this time," Dean Askew said.

He explained, saying dictators would be fighting on both sides. "England and France won't care about the type of government on their side as long as they get help," he declared.

Dean Askew said that after his talks with English, French and German government officials, and his conversations with the people themselves, he is convinced neither England nor Germany plan a war in the near future. He believes both sides will wait for their newly formed alliances to freeze.

Change in Policy. He pointed to the change of British foreign policy. In former times England dabbled into European affairs when it was advantageous for her to do so, took her fingers out of the fire and put

Fish Catches Pesky Fisherman --- Gives 29 Proofs Sharks Do Bite

MIAMI, Fla., July 30.—(AP)—Captain Fenimore Johnson reported one of his men was caught by a fish. The fellow didn't like the reverse status at all.

Johnson is skipper of the yacht Elsie Fenimore, on which he, E. F. Mac Ewan and G. W. Barnes, the latter two from Philadelphia, are taking submarine motion pictures off Andros Island, Bahamas, where there are coral caverns known as "blue holes."

The skipper reported to Miami that a shark was needed in one of the holes for a movie sequence, and to make sure the leather-skinned creature would be there at the proper time they caught one, tied a rope around its tail and forced it into the hole. When it came time to haul him out the fun started. The shark battled so violently, according to Johnson, the diver-cameramen went to the bottom to tow him out.

All went well until the rope snagged on a coral pinnacle, giving the shark a moment of slack. He used it to race at Mac Ewan and snap. His teeth raked the diver's flesh between his shoulders and clamped tight on his blue denim jacket. Barnes grabbed the rope attached to the fish's tail.

Mac Ewan caught hold of the yacht's anchor. And there they were—Barnes had the shark, the shark had Mac Ewan and Mac Ewan had the anchor. Everybody held tight.

No telling how long that might have gone on had the skipper not come to the rescue. He dived in, used a knife to cut a piece out of Mac Ewan's jumper, thus freeing him from the shark.

There were 29 tooth marks and a bit of missing skin on the photographer's back, reported Johnson.

and more serious than the mistakes made in dealing with the Spanish revolution."

No Neutral Countries. "The real danger of war will come when Germany threatens British trade relations in the east," Dean Askew found the average European believing the United States already has committed herself to the side of England and in the event of war is counting on this country heavily for supplies and later men.

Pointing to the complete orientation of the United States foreign policy, he declared the United States was preparing now to expect trouble from both seas.

"No countries in Europe will be neutral in the next war and many will be forced to fight on sides against their will. For instance, Sweden. She will face the decision of fighting with Germany or of being overrun by Germans. Germany needs the materials Sweden can supply. In this connection the plight of Belgium is indeed pathetic. The Belgians have made no preparations for war."

Dean Askew then turned briefly to a discussion of local government.

"The local governments, both in the United States and other countries, are coming more and more frequently in contact with the central government. The old established governmental practices are being upset. Central government activity, in both democracies and dictatorships, will continue apace and there will never be a return to the simple form of government we once knew. The central government is in every economic field of activity and will stay there."

to remove such belt-wide surpluses as may exist. The problem should be attacked from a belt-wide and not merely a Georgia-wide angle.

One group which met with the Governor and came from Bulloch county.

They presented a resolution calling for the closing of the markets and a general conference between the Governor, warehouse officials, growers and manufacturers to work out a price agreement.

The other group, selected by the Douglas meeting, was headed by Echols. Its members opposed closing the markets.

Echols said the Washington officials would be asked to press for senate action on the crop control amendment already adopted by the house which would permit a marketing quota for the 1940 crop.

Tobacco farmers in a referendum last winter voted to remove marketing quota restrictions. And unless the senate approves the pending amendment no vote could be taken before November 15.

Should the conference decide that an early referendum be held, officials said it was probable that action would be taken to close markets until the vote could be taken.

Among other suggestions over the week end was one from J. H. Meek, director of Virginia's division of markets, that the tobacco price be pegged at a minimum of 18 cents.

Governor Fred P. Cone, of Florida, suggested that growers might do better by holding their tobacco off the market.

Both Florida and Georgia, along with North and South Carolina and Virginia, were asked to send representatives to the Washington conference. R. S. Bennis, of Gainesville, and H. J. Horne, of Live Oak, will represent Florida, while en route to the meeting from Georgia was H. L. Wingate, of Pelham.

The Atlanta Optimists Club will hear an address on the "Life of Mussolini" at its regular meeting at 12:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Sidney Lanier room of Davidson-Paxon's tea room. R. E. Crawford, who has spent several years in Italy, will be the speaker.

China Sees Peace in Six Months Ex-Atlantan Writes From Shanghai

The end of Sino-Japanese warfare within six months is predicted by the Chinese, Eugene A. Turner, former Georgia Tech student, now general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in China, stated in a letter from Shanghai made public here yesterday.

Speaking of the undeclared war, Turner wrote: "Encouraged by the present outlook, the Chinese for the first time are predicting its end. They say now that, without any overtures on their part, peace may come in six months."

Cities Tokyo's Debt. Reasons, according to the Chinese, continued Turner, include the Japanese national debt of more than 20 billion yen, to which is being added an annual deficit of more than three billion yen; rapidly increasing military difficulties of the Japanese, and the increasingly improved position and strength of the Chinese.

Turner served for a number of years as secretary of the Georgia Tech Y. M. C. A. and held membership in the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church. He is widely known in Atlanta and Georgia. While at Tech he was a coach of track teams and active in campus publications.

Referring to his work, Turner wrote: "My time is now divided among four cities in two provinces. Last week, I was in Tsinan, which has a population of half a million, found that war conditions, including collapse of former social and educational machinery, has brought new opportunities to the 'Y' there."

Partly in Hiding. "For months it had to stand by with its staff quiet and partly in hiding. Its usual constituency and support went before the winds of war, but youth remained, and, to my surprise, I found that the 'Y' shifting its emphasis to meet the need of the present situation and conditions, had become primarily an educational institution with a student enrollment of 723."

J. B. (PETE) ALLEN, AD EXECUTIVE OF MACON, DIES AT 44

Former Atlantan Succumbs to Pneumonia Here; Services To Be Held This Morning.

J. B. (Pete) Allen, 44, formerly of Atlanta but for the past seven years a resident of Macon, Ga., where he was engaged in advertising work, died early yesterday morning at a private hospital here.

Mr. Allen was stricken with appendicitis last Tuesday and pneumonia developed following an operation.

He was advertising director of the A. C. Rhodes & Sons furniture store chain, and a former advertising solicitor for the Macon Telegraph. He lived with his mother, Mrs. A. J. Allen, in Macon.

Mr. Allen had made his home in Atlanta for a short time when he left Macon temporarily in 1932. Prior to his connection with the Telegraph he had worked for the Macon Evening News as an advertising solicitor.

Surviving beside his mother are his wife; two daughters, Mrs. Ed Hanson and Miss Dorothy Allen, and a granddaughter, Dianne Hanson, all of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 11:30 o'clock this morning at Spring Hill with Dr. Louis D. Newton officiating. The body will be sent to Macon by H. M. Patterson & Son where burial will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Compulsory Unionization Hit in Poll

Manufacturers' Group
Reports 61 Per Cent Oppose
Enforced Membership,
57 Two Years Ago.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers reported today 61 per cent of the persons polled in a recent national survey were opposed to compulsory unionization of workers.

This, the association said, compared with a 57 per cent two years ago. The association said factory workers registered a 50.7 per cent opposition in 1937 as against 40.7 per cent in 1935.

Who to Credit?
To the question, "Who has done most for the United States in the last 10 years," 24 per cent of those interviewed gave credit to manufacturers, the association said. Others, it added, replied as follows:

Industrialists	14 per cent
Merchants	11 per cent
Bankers	10 per cent
Labor leaders	9 per cent
Political men	7 per cent
Social reformers	6 per cent
Don't know	32 per cent

The question concerning unionization was: "Should every worker be forced to join a union?" these, the association reported, were the replies in percentages:

No	1937 1939
Yes	57 61
Sometimes	23 20
Don't know	11 8

Home economics specialists warn that a hat with a drooping brim may exaggerate drooping lines and sagging muscles around mouth and neck.

It will accommodate between 30 and 50 persons.

The ground floor contains a large indoor walking room where walking exercises will be given in cold and rainy weather. Outdoor walking facilities are provided on the grounds.

Also included in ground floor accommodations will be heliotherapy facilities, including sun lamps, infra-red lamps, paraffin baths, whirlpool baths for arms and legs, a drug room, appliance shop, plaster room and nurses' living quarters.

The second floor contains a completely equipped operating suite with medical offices, laboratory, X-ray room and developing facilities. There also will be a library and examining rooms.

Patients' rooms, with single and double wards, will be on the third floor, which also will contain a diet kitchen and patients' recreation, or living room. At present the accommodations on the third floor will take care of 36 patients, but are so arranged that additional patients can be taken care of should the necessity arise.

Work on the building was begun last September and was just recently completed. E. E. Boone Jr., is the administrator of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation and will have supervision.

NATIONAL NEWS

PRESIDENCY.

Roosevelt Lands 70-Pound Marlin.

OCEAN CITY, Md., July 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt caught a 70-pound marlin today and later reports to his shore guide said he had boated a second one whose weight was not given.

Captain Crawford Savage, who supplied equipment and advice to the Presidential yacht Potomac, said he estimated the weight of the first one at 70 pounds. The guide said the President fought his first fish half an hour before it was boated and that it made about 12 jumps before it was brought alongside.

Harry Hopkins, secretary of commerce, also caught a marlin, of undisclosed weight.

POLITICS.

Rumor Job Purge In Louisiana.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 30.—(AP)—While more than 50 federal investigators worked on Louisiana affairs at New Orleans, jobholders were reported fearful to day that Governor Earl K. Long was about to purge state pay rolls.

Reports circulated a "cleanup" was imminent of "gravy" jobs in state departments.

Will F. D. R. Back McNutt?

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—Speculation as to whether Paul V. McNutt might win President Roosevelt's support for the Democratic, presidential nomination next year was revived tonight by the Indianan's vigorous advocacy of a cardinal tenet of administration foreign policy.

Politicians in the capital heard with much interest that McNutt had spoken out in an address at Cleveland for the Roosevelt-Hull doctrine of co-operation with "like-minded" nations.

Some regarded McNutt's remarks as an indication that, if he were elected President, he would carry on in the direction of Mr. Roosevelt's recent unsuccessful effort to obtain repeal of the neutrality act's arms embargo provision.

RELIGION.

Moral Rearmament Assembly Closes.

MONTEREY, Calif., July 30.—(AP)—Moral recovery was proclaimed today to be a prerequisite to economic recovery in America. The speaker was Dr. Frank Buchman, founder of the Oxford movement and leader of the second world moral rearmament assembly here.

"We will never have economic recovery in America until we have a moral recovery," Dr. Buchman told 1,500 delegates attending the closing session of the 10-day conference.

"What America has got to learn," he said, "is to have a group mind. Moral rearmament is that mind."

Dr. Buchman said "it is not true" that religion and politics "do not mix."

"The Oxford group and moral rearmament," he said, "has nothing to do with politics, but still has everything to do with politics because it is revolution of human nature."

AVIATION

100 Air Passengers At Ocean Terminal.

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., July 30.—(AP)—This Long Island town became a "Grand Central" of international passenger aviation today, with more than 100 passengers moving through incident to arrivals of six and departures of four ocean liners.

The Dixie Clipper arrived from the Azores with 10 passengers and 11 crew members and left for Baltimore; the Yankee Clipper left for Southampton with a record passenger list of 30 and crew of 12; the French survey plane Ville de St. Pierre arrived from the Azores with a crew of nine; the Bermuda Clipper arrived from Bermuda with 24 passengers and seven crew members and left for Baltimore.

Sally Rand Claims Record.

RENO, Nev., July 30.—(AP)—Sally Rand, who also can fly an airplane, landed today and claimed a new San Francisco-Reno speed record for light planes.

Accompanied by E. E. Mouton, former government aeronautics inspector, the dancer was timed at one hour, 54 minutes for the approximately 200 miles.

Mouton said the previous record for this type plane was two hours, 35 minutes.

CRIME.

Strive To Prove They're Guilty!

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP)—Jack (Jigger) Jacobson, 22, and Morris (Mosey) Gottlieb, 35, today re-enacted a year-old stick-up to prove the innocence of a man they never knew had been arrested, indicted, convicted, sentenced and imprisoned for the crime.

Detectors said they expected the prompt release of Philip Caruso, 24, who has already served eight months of a 10 to 20-year sentence in Sing Sing.

Caruso had been identified by the holdup victim, Eugene Scammiello. Today Jacobson and Gottlieb drove again with Scammiello. They described in detail the clothes each wore, the conversation that passed between them, and the exact action of the holdup. When it was over, Scammiello wiped his brow and said "these are the fellows who did it, all right. I must have picked the wrong man before."

Gottlieb and Jacobson, both having records of several arrests, said they were "very sorry an innocent guy took the rap."

GENERAL.

Squalus Survivors Assist at Benefit.

RYE BEACH, N. H., July 30.—(AP)—Nine survivors of the sunken submarine Squalus served as ushers today at an outdoor concert given by the Boston Symphony orchestra to benefit dependents of the 26 men who died in the disaster.

Despite fog and light rain preceding the concert, it was attended by more than 2,500 persons, a number of whom sought autographs from Lieutenant Oliver F. Naquin, commander of the vessel which plunged to the ocean bottom off Portsmouth during tests last May. The officer sat inconspicuously in the rear of the audience.

ATLANTA KILLED AS CAR OVERTURNS

Textile Worker, 42, Dies;
Two Companions Hurt
Near Milledgeville.

Paul Landon Waters, 42-year-old Atlanta textile worker, of 1237 Oak street S. W., was killed instantly and two companions, both of Atlanta, injured when an automobile in which they were riding overturned on Route 24, 11 miles north of Milledgeville, Ga., early yesterday morning. State Highway patrolmen said the car turned over three times.

Injured were A. W. Parks, 31, who received a fractured leg, and James E. Langer, 37, who received internal injuries. Both men were taken to Baldwin Memorial hospital, Milledgeville, where Langer was reported to be in a critical condition.

Sergeant George Standard and Trooper J. V. Richards, of the Madison district patrol headquarters, investigated the accident.

Surviving are his wife; a son, Luther Waters; a daughter, Miss Barbara Ray Waters, and one sister, Mrs. Walter Scoggins, all of Atlanta. Funeral services will be conducted at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the chapel of J. Austin Dillon with the Rev. W. Lee Cutts officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery.

LENDING PROGRAM MAY BE ABANDONED

which this congress is out of White House control. The resolution, which pledged continued support of Mr. Roosevelt's "great social and economic program" but side-tracked endorsement of specific legislation, averted a party dogfight but did not disguise the fact that prolonging the session was apt to lead to further revolts in both houses against the President.

Barkley Sees Vote Today.
Adjournment, even at the sacrifice of most of the already battered lending bill, would do more than halt these party uprisings, in the judgment of some administration aides.

It would leave the Washington political sounding board to the President and his lieutenants, and send Democrats of house and senate back home to check up with the voters on which way to jump in the incessant party policy tug-of-war.

Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, predicted at the end of Saturday's session that the senate would vote late tomorrow on its $1,640,000,000 version of the lending bill.

Repeatedly, last week, Barkley sought to curtail debate and bring the bill to a vote on passage. But a coalition of Democrats and Republicans, working for its defeat, blocked him at every turn while it trimmed out $850,000,000 worth of loan authorizations asked by the administration, including $500,000,000 for highways and $350,000,000 for railroad equipment.

Barkley finally obtained an agreement last night. He told the senate, "There seems to be some sort of an undercurrent that's causing this bill to drift." The agreement is that no senator may speak more than 15 minutes on any one amendment or on the bill itself.

Close Ballot Likely.
Excepting the vote on final passage, which both sides admit will be close, the only highly controversial senate vote remaining will be on a provision authorizing the export-import bank to finance United States trade in Latin America to the extent of $100,000,000.

Senator Austin, of Vermont, the acting Republican leader, said an effort would be made to trim this to $25,000,000.

While senators faced the prospect of more hot words in their air-cooled chamber Monday, the house scheduled a routine session.

The principal item on its program was a measure to give the civilian conservation corps a five-year lease on life.

A $1,950,000,000 version of the lending bill came from the house banking committee late yesterday; and there was a slim possibility that an effort would be made to call it up in the house on Tuesday, although leaders said the housing bill was more likely to be brought up then. The latter measure would double the borrowing authority of the United States housing authority for the purpose of expanding its slum clearance and new housing program.

PETROLEUM RETAILERS PLAN STAG BARBECUE

The Georgia Association of Petroleum Retailers will have their annual outing and barbecue at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Lakemoore, the home of Wiley Moore on Roswell road.

T. R. Brooks, president of the group, said yesterday the outing will be a stag affair and that there will be no set program and no speeches. All service station operators in the Atlanta area have been invited to attend.

Members of the Republican-Democratic coalition in the house predicted they would have the votes to shelve the housing bill after a motion was made that it be considered. The regular Democratic leadership, apparently apprehensive that this might occur, passed up opportunities to offer such a motion Friday and again yesterday.

Many persons believed that, if the house bill were shelved Tuesday, the lending measure would stand more chance of suffering a similar fate when the house coalition, encouraged by success, had a crack at it.

Seeking a Miracle

Faced with the extremity of its subjection to Japan, China is turning to other forms of resistance than that of its armed forces. Apparently powerless on the field of battle against a better-equipped and better-trained enemy, the leaders of New China are seeking other modes by which to keep alive the spirit of independent resistance and to create a condition which, in the eventual outcome, must result in failure of the Tokyo plans.

They call their new plan "National Spiritual Mobilization," and it is put forth under the sponsorship of none other than Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who is chairman for the movement.

Without purpose to discourage such a movement, it must be pointed out that cold experience indicates it cannot, in full effect, succeed. For it depends for success upon a sacrificial loyalty to country which could not be found, 100 per cent, in any land, much less in a country like China with its population of 400,000,000 divided into innumerable localized groups, ignorant of most problems beyond their immediate ken. Likewise the leadership of China is not, in large proportion, of such a quality as to expect loyalty to such a proposal. There are excellent Chinese leaders and the record of Chiang Kai-shek is beyond reproach, since the Japanese invasion began.

On the other hand, China's generals as a group consist too largely of the "war lord" type, bandit chieftains who care nothing for the masses of the Chinese peoples so long as they may control and exploit those masses over their own special territory. Such "generals" are notoriously susceptible to graft and to bribery, and there are but few of them who would hesitate to betray millions of their fellow-Chinese for a little pecuniary or political reward. The entire history of government in China is a history of officeholders who, almost 100 per cent, grow rich through graft ground out of the pitifully poor people.

Yet, this Spiritual Mobilization plan calls on every Chinese man and woman to observe an oath which would strain the ability and the loyalty of most people, even better schooled in sacrifice for a cause. For that oath calls for acts which, if carried out, would result only in death at the hands of the invading Japanese.

A Chinese observing that oath would refuse to sell any article whatsoever, under any circumstances, to a Japanese. He would refuse to serve as guide for the enemy or for traitors. He would refuse to work for the enemy, to purchase enemy goods or to accept enemy-issued banknotes or the currency of enemy-controlled "puppet" banks. And so on in similar vein.

If such an oath could be observed by the Chinese as a whole, the Japanese position would soon be untenable. But it is unreasonable to expect a few thousand Chinese coolies, ignorant and half starved, to face death at the point of Japanese guns by refusing to dig a ditch desired by the Japanese command. Or to expect starving Chinese people to refuse any sort of currency that may be exchanged for food.

The Spiritual Mobilization plan is an ethical, national ideal. But an ideal apparently unattainable in such a country as China, at least.

"Army of Spades"

Quietly, without much publicity, a new and important national movement has come into being in India. It is the large and growing "Army of Spades," which was founded seven years ago and which now has a total membership of 350,000. Instead of shouldering guns, the men of this unusual army shoulder spades. It is an efficient, well-disciplined force. In India, where discipline in many instances is something to be desired greatly, the "Army of Spades" may one day play an important role in the national life.

The army was founded by a middle-class Moslem, Alama Inayatullah Mashrafi, who gave up a government job to organize the movement. Mashrafi, a graduate of Cambridge University, is emphatic that the army is in no way fascist. Thus far it has kept out of politics, appearing to exist only for the purpose of giving its members mutual service and a sense of discipline. Members of the army are called Khaksars. Mashrafi claims the movement has as its watchwords peace, amity and brotherhood. It is open to all religious communities, Moslem, Hindu and Christian alike, and it renders service to all regardless of caste, creed or race. Khaksars pay no subscription, but pay only for their uniform, which is along military lines.

The spade emblem which they have adopted signifies the dignity of labor and has a religious significance in the reference to the Moslem scripture in which the Prophet of Islam is said to have smashed the might of three empires with his spade.

Youth, the Blessed

Ranking high among the many good things brought to Atlanta by the Baptist World Alliance stands that declaration by Dr. Luther Wesley Smith, exonerating the youth of the world of blame for the undesirable things in today's life and placing the responsibility upon the older generations.

Such an expression, especially from a minister, was overdue. There has been too much loose generalization about the younger generation, too many general charges of laxity in character, immorality and general reckless carelessness.

Just because a tiny fraction of modern American youth is to be found in the ranks of lawbreakers, moralists have declared that the oncoming generation is defiant of all constituted authority. Just because, in rare instances, some pitiful youngster, little more than a child, has met retribution for violation of society's rules, all youth has been branded as immoral.

As a matter of fact, easily recognizable by a modicum of observation and thought, the young generation of today is a finer set of human beings than any that have gone before. They may not be so fearful of those ancient bugaboos of "what they say," and "what will they say," but they seek truth with clear, fearless eyes and they hold a greater respect for themselves, physically and as individual souls, than ever did their forebears.

It is promiscuous, perhaps, but the hope of the world lies in its youth and there never was a youth more worthy of the faith of a world than the youth of today.

Youth is, above all others, blessed. Blessed in the gift of a new, free approach to problems, individual and universal. Blessed in hearts and minds more newly come from the fountainhead of life, both of body and of spirit. Blessed in ideals less tainted with the corruption of worldly compromise than those of their elders.

Youth is the age of optimism and of hope. Youth is the age of courage.

The world may have wandered far astray from those precepts laid down for its guidance two thousand years ago. Designing men, in many places, may seek to mold the minds and bodies of youth to their own unscrupulous ambitions.

But youth itself stands intrinsically free. And in the hearts and minds of youth, the world over, there lives today a new resolution and a new consecration. They hold the seeds of a freedom for mankind that, some day in the future, will surpass all liberties humanity has ever known and they hold, likewise, the promise of a race made finer far because of better and purer lives and because of truer and more sanctified thinking.

Stock Exchange Survey

That big business has been increasingly interested in what the public thinks about it has been apparent during the past few years. Latest indication of the trend in this direction comes from the New York Stock Exchange, to millions of persons a vague and mysterious center of high finance. The Exchange has moved to learn just what the public thinks about it—and why.

To this end, Exchange officials appointed a well-known marketing and research expert, Elmo Roper, to listen to the ears of the nation. He will make a nation-wide survey, among all classes and conditions of men and women. An army of field workers will question a cross-section of the country, persons in groups representing various economic, geographical, educational and political conditions. The questions will be geared along lines designed to show the extent and kind of opinion the great mass of the people have on the "stock market."

From the information gathered, the Exchange will base a public relations campaign aimed at creating good will and breaking down prejudices against the institution. The reports of the field workers should make interesting reading, not only to the Exchange officials, but to the public at large.

An Italian seer sets the world's end for Friday, October 13—a poor time for it, as the outcome will be lost among the Saturday football results.

From indulgent Miami comes word that authorities "will do nothing about bathing suits," as the ablest prosecutor has to have some evidence.

Among those who are in the hands of their friends, they hope, are presidential possibilities and adagio dancers.

The World Fair parachute that dangled aloft for five hours is progress. It is only the old-fashioned stuck elevator, with air-conditioning.

Editorial of the Day

AN OVERWORKED PRIVILEGE

(From The Detroit Free Press)

One out of every eight purchases made by women at department stores in the United States is returned to the store, according to a committee of the Twentieth Century Fund, a privately endowed research organization, which has been looking into the cost of distribution in this country.

And that means that one sales day out of eight is lost to the stores.

The committee further reports that nearly 48 per cent of the women interviewed frankly admitted that they themselves were at fault in the returned-goods problem.

The privilege of returning purchases obviously can be overdone.

All reputable stores stand behind their goods. And they are glad to make reasonable adjustments on the principle that "the customer is always right."

When, though, almost half the women customers interviewed in a government survey, to say nothing of men customers, admit that they themselves were at fault in ordering goods they did not keep, there is something to be said for the stores that suffer from their changeableness of mind.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

MATTER OF POOR TIMING WASHINGTON, July 30.—If proof is desired that the American State Department is no tool of the British foreign office, it may be discovered in the denunciation of the commercial treaty with Japan. In this instance, lack of co-operation between the American and British governments seems to have proved seriously damaging to the interests of both.

The problem is really one of timing. Denunciation of the Japanese treaty has long been advocated in many quarters here, the object being to make it easier for this country to threaten the Japanese. With the treaty in force, it was out of the question to proclaim punitive embargoes on Japanese exports and imports. Now the possibility is ever present that we may withhold the cotton, scrap-iron and oil which the Japanese so desperately need, and can get nowhere else. Naturally, like the old-fashioned schoolmaster's birch standing in the corner of the classroom, it will tend to keep order.

A LITTLE EARLIER The problem of timing may be stated in the simple question, why did we wait so long to act? Since the celebrated Tientsin incident many days ago, the Japanese have been running riot in their disregard of other nations' rights in China. The British, being the nation directly involved in the Tientsin incident, were in effect called on to put up or shut up. With their terrifying European commitments, they were forced to take a soft line. As a preliminary to negotiations, they had to accord the Japanese something very like belligerent rights on Chinese soil, which means that the Japanese can do pretty nearly what they want in the future.

Meanwhile, we also have been having trouble with the Japanese, though not of quite so serious a character as the Tientsin incident. Their attacks on our nationals in China have had, however, the same ultimate purpose as the incident—to drive all foreigners but themselves out of the country, or at least to put an end to the foreign concession system. Thus our interest was clearly identical with British interests.

In the past few weeks, the State Department has been engaged in continual representations to the Japanese government. Secretary of State Cordell Hull has taken the attitude that the Japanese ought to be fully warned of what this government might do. But the time of warning was so long, and action was so interminably deferred that in the meanwhile the British were forced to concede the Japanese demand. The British climb-down breaks the united front of powers in China. Our denunciation of the Japanese commercial treaty has the effect of disarming us from what the British have done. But experts here are convinced that, if we had acted a little earlier, the British would probably never have been forced to climb down, at all. The effect of this poor timing is sure to be felt in the future.

DARK FOREBODINGS If the experts are correct, moreover, it is time for this country to think a little more seriously about the Far Eastern situation. Consideration of it seems to be largely confined to the State Department. Yet there is plenty of informed opinion to the effect that, before another 12 months have passed, the Japanese will have offered us such provocation as we ought not to let pass without fighting.

To date we have got off easily, for the reason implied in the difficulties surrounding the Tientsin incident. In order to prevent precisely the Anglo-American co-operation which would have been so helpful in this past month, the Japanese have been careful to reserve their major outrages for the British. Their policy is to deal with the British first, and then to clean up us after the British are out of the way. Quite obviously, it is not good sense for us to permit a potential ally to be continuously weakened, while we calmly await the fate which will be ours if the weakening process is successful.

Two questions ought to be decided by every thinking person in this country. Do we want a Japanese empire dominating the entire Far East? We are chafed that we will first be chased out of China in the most humiliating fashion? And are we prepared to run the risk of Japanese attack on the undefended Philippines, which will be American soil until 1946? If such passivity is appealing, we ought not to fool around with measures like the denunciation of the commercial treaty, which is likely to make the Japanese join the Italo-German anti-comintern military alliance. If, on the other hand, we do not wish to be entirely passive, we should be active in a planned, logical and clear-headed way.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

*I remember so well how it happened,
When horror stunned all of the world,
When we read the news with our breakfast
That Europe to war had been hurled.*

*That day we could transact no business,
All regular routine was stopped,
We had to adjust all our viewpoints
To a civilization that toppled.*

When the News Came.

Any of you who have read, of recent days, the items appearing at the foot of this column, culled from the news reports of 25 years ago, know that they have dealt with the outbreak of the European war, a war between Germany and Austria and France, Belgium, Britain and Russia. Others, including Italy and the United States, came into it later.

Those were dramatic days, in the late summer of 1914, when each edition to hit the streets brought a new line of some new development in the European crisis. Told of some effort for peace that had failed, of some new preparation for war.

It all began, you know, with the assassination of an archduke at a little town in Serbia. Austria got awful hot about it and demanded such abrupt atonement by Serbia—which, after all, could hardly be held responsible for the wild action of one insane man—that the smaller country couldn't stand the strain. Germany jumped into the dispute, backing Austria. Russia stood on the side of Serbia. And Britain tried desperately to enact the role of peace-maker, suggesting a four-power conference to settle the affair. Instead, Germany refused the conference proposal. And mobilization was ordered by the German kaiser.

Then the Germans marched into Belgium and even Britain, obligated to defend their small neighbor, had to go to war. And the four years of horror were begun.

In a Lobby At Athens.

On the morning that the news came of Britain's entry into the war I was in Athens, Ga., on business. There, a few days, stopping at the Georgian hotel.

After reading The Constitution that morning, I sat in the lobby of the hotel, too stunned to realize much of anything else. I know I had a feeling of physical sickness. It seemed such an impossibility, a thing which had seemed so remote as to be beyond reason. All Europe at war and Britain, too.

What my thoughts were, that morning, I'll never recall. Business was out of the question. Mind simply would not contemplate any other subject. Somehow, without really thinking about it, I know I sat in that lobby for the entire forenoon.

Later in the day talked about the news with some Athens friends. They decided could do no good there, so came home.

The Days Followed.

Then the days of wartime followed. The front page was dominated, every morning, by the news from the battle lines. There came reports of the Battle of the Marne. Of Ypres and Loos and Zeebrugge. Names of little villages in Belgium and northern France became as familiar to us as Gainesville and Buford and Cartersville and Decatur.

We visioned the distance by saying, "Not quite as far as from here to Marietta." And there came, of course, the time when the United States, for what seemed good cause, entered the fray. "To save democracy," and so forth. There was Camp Gordon and the prison compound for interned Germans near Fort McPherson. Atlanta was full of men in uniform. Everything was subordinated to them, their interests and their wellbeing.

And they, the 82d, marched away to France. Then came, after awhile, the first news of our boys, the 82d, under fire. Printed first in The Constitution. And all the other stories. You remember.

The paragraph at the foot of this column, "Twenty-five Years Ago Today," should be especially interesting for the next four years. Pray God there'll be no new reminiscences of like nature for 25 years hence.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, July 31, 1914:

"London, July 31.—Early this morning came the news that the German cabinet, presided over by Emperor, at Potsdam, until midnight and that a censorship order on the telegraph lines is being imposed at Berlin. This is interpreted here as implying preparations for German mobilization and a few hours will probably decide whether Europe is to be involved in universal warfare."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, July 31, 1869:

"Miss Daisy Sale, one of Augusta's sweet singers, and Miss Laura Pardue, of Aiken, S. C., are visiting Miss Pierce at 165 Nelson street."

Farm Women's Jewels.

Countrywomen of the world—some 300 from the United States—went to London for their farms for a world conference recently and gave a lead in jewelry fashions to London's Mayfairites.

Heirloom pieces worn by delegates with their national costumes made more sophisticated eyes gleam enviously. And now debutantes and matrons are asking their jewelers for similar earrings, necklaces and belts in traditional peasant designs.

Most admired were the earrings of the Scandinavian women. They were triangles of gold suspended on a slender chain with filigree work holding semi-precious stones like aquamarine and topaz in the center.

Necklaces of graded gold coins and belts of thick gold chain, or gold and silver plaques beautifully engraved, were other traditional pieces likely to prove fashionable here.

To Cheer England.

In England, C. E. Kottrell decided something should be done to offset crisis news in daily papers—so he instituted the Brighter News Service, which prints "cheer-ers" only.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Might Have Been New York, July 29.—In calling Mr. Been Boost Garner, a poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man John L. Lewis was completely ambiguous until he explained that his remarks were intended as a personal attack. Up to then they might have been construed as a boost, even as the prelude to an endorsement of Mr. Garner for President in 1940, for some of Mr. Lewis' best friends have been poker players and whisky drinkers, even gamblers and drunkards, and he has never declared any marked aversion, social or political, for individuals whose private character, measured by performance, seemed no prettier than that of the Cactus Coolidge.

Mr. Garner is a 9 o'clock man who has been married to his No. 1 wife for 44 years, and if he is notorious at all it is for his domesticity. In this respect, he might be called a rank reactionary, but it would seem unwise to go before the country on that issue.

It was no secret, even before Mr. Lewis cut loose with his personalities, that Mr. Garner played perhaps the best hand of poker in Washington since the death of Indian Charlie Curtis, the old prairie jockey, and his tomato tan was the envy of many a parched and envious hypocrite in the days of prohibition and the Wayne B. Wheeler terror.

Hard To Get Quorum His experiments in the field of the inside straight probably have been reduced in recent years, however, for it is hard to get a quorum for a game operating under a 9 o'clock limit and, on the score of whisky drinking, even Mr. Lewis can claim to remember a time when it was necessary to call the house dick at 2 a. m. because Mr. Garner was giving "Sweet Adeline" or the "Internationale."

Mr. Lewis would do well to ponder whether, in attempting to discredit the vice president, he has not repudiated some of his own best friends and as far as Mr. Garner is concerned, publicized rather endearing private traits which his backers could not gracefully mention.

As to the charge of labor baiting, inspection of the case will reveal a contention that John L. Lewis is labor, that others claiming to represent workmen are counterfeits, and that workmen who decline to yield their liberties to him and pay him an income tax, submit under pressure, to the detriment of their rights, to either enemies of labor or face less nonentities who don't know what is best for them and need his benign coercion. Only on that premise is it evil to oppose Mr. Lewis and his ambitions, an evil now attributed to Mr. Garner.

Mr. Lewis' ambition is to recruit or coerce into the CIO every working man and woman in the United States and to collect from the earnings of all those millions by legalized extortion, in the shape of the check-off, an annual tribute comparable to the Treasury's collections for the phantom fund for social security.

Purpose Was His organization, Concealed starting with a purpose, now openly aspires to conditions which could censor out of the entire press all material hostile to the CIO and suppress all books and pamphlets unfriendly to his personal leadership and the CIO as labor.

With the money obtained by the income tax of the earnings of every employee in the country, the CIO, without assuming the obligations of government, or a man-leized government, would have the power which Father Coughlin strove for a few years ago when he revealed a purpose of dictating to the government. This aim is constructively revealed in the activities and propaganda of CIO members and it is just possible that there are some Americans who think Mr. Garner is guilty of no evil, nor of labor-baiting, either, but only of patriotism, in anything that he may legally do to thwart the man who could be dictator.

Now Mr. Lewis is in a position to collect tribute from American citizens who are anti-Lewis and anti-CIO and give or lend their money to the campaign funds of a party which they abhor and fear. His CIO can throw them out of their jobs for refusing to promote his political program and his own ambitions, whatever they ultimately may be. It is not certain just what they are, but at the present stage he reveals that opposition to his vast job-monopoly, his taxing power and ultimate censorship is an assault on John L. Lewis, thus an assault on labor and thus evil.

Being a severely righteous man, John L. Lewis, risen to full power, could be expected to punish such evildoers, somehow. The method would be a mere matter of detail. Hitler uses the ax and Stalin the rifle.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS There was a committee in to see what could be done about making Atlanta a more musical city. This would be a very happy city if that could be done. Personally, I would prefer a number of cafes where orchestras played waltzes, preferably the waltzes of Vienna, instead of a season of grand opera. If there must be opera I would favor Gilbert and Sullivan but then that is a personal taste. I like almost any opera, Grand or Gilbert and Sullivan.

You like music, don't you? they asked. "Indeed, I do," said I, and I almost told the story of the time when I served as a sort of conductor at one of the unique concerts in the long, musical history of Cleveland, Ohio. Since this particular evening I have been sure that music indeed hath charms to soothe the savage breast. I saw it soothe the savage breasts of two house detectives.

This was at the time the late W. L. (Young) Stribling was training for his world's championship fight with Max Schmeling. Stribling was training at Geauga Lake, a bizarre amusement park about 20 miles out from Cleveland. It was a small body of water surrounded by the amusement park, a number of summer cottages in which lived jockeys, jockeys' valets and a number of summer residents. Max Schmeling was training at Conneaut Lake park over the line in Pennsylvania. His place, too, was bizarre. The undertakers of Ohio and Pennsylvania held a convention there during the training period. The hotel veranda and lobby was lined with displays of caskets, embalming fluids, rubber wreaths of the like. One night the newspapermen placed one of these wreaths on the chest of a brother who was sleeping heavily and it was there when he awakened. "I suppose it was only a coincidence he died a month later of a ruptured appendix. Anyhow, they were two bizarre fight camps."

IN CLEVELAND Madison Square Garden was promoting the fight but had removed it from New York to Cleveland because of the boxing commission's attitude toward Schmeling in the former city.

The Garden had its press headquarters in one of the downtown hotels. It was a large suite of rooms. This was in the days of prohibition but there was plenty of beer and liquor over from the Canadian side of the lake and there were other forms of liquid obtainable in all cities, large and small, during the era of the "noble experiment." The beer was kept in one of the bathtubs, well iced. The newspapermen would come into headquarters once a week and have a try at sitting around and talking. Not all newspapermen drink, but there was no attempt to force it on them. The Garden just had it there, handy like, for those who did. I say this because it has no bearing on the musical. The music was a big success and the beer did have much to do with it. It just started.

There was a large crowd sitting around late one evening. It was late June and quite warm. In any newspaper gathering of size there is at least one quartet, the members of which gravitate together. They seem to know by the sight of one another who can sing bass or tenor or what not.

THE BIG CONCERT This particular evening, at about 11:30, the quartet started singing, quietly, "When You Were a Tulip." All men, without exception, like to sing. It is a sort of repressed desire, indulged in while bathing or while in the company of other men who can't sing, either. The conversation has died down and we are getting tired of one another, so the singing took on. Pretty soon the whole room was singing. After a while the clerk called and said there had been protests. The singing kept on.

Soon one of the house detectives came up and was admitted. It seemed he liked to sing and was rather proud of his bass. He started helping out. In a half hour another detective came and he could sing a mean tenor. He was a short, fat fellow. Later on the assistant manager came up and he had a singing voice, too.

Later on, we ran out of songs and it was then that someone asked for the words to "My Old Kentucky Home." I was able to supply them. After that came "Old Black Joe" and "Suwanee River."

The strangest thing happened. When the assistant manager came up the door was left open. A great many of the guests came into the room in their pajamas. A great many of them had the very finest time, just singing old songs. It didn't seem at all strange the guests were there in pajamas. With the exception of three or four, no one of the forty or so in the rooms and halls was inspired by beer. It was just an evening of singing. It stopped about 3 o'clock that morning.

The next day the manager said, "You know, it was the funniest thing. I thought some of our guests would leave, but you know, three or four of them came by and said they had a swell time singing with the newspapermen."

I am sure there was no reason to tell this story in connection with making Atlanta more musical. It was just that the visit of the committee made me remember it. Excuse it, please.

Luxurious Means of Travel Mean

Nothing to One Who Has ## Already Arrived

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

A certain furniture manufacturing company, with headquarters in New York and showrooms in various cities, caters to people who desire quality without regard for price. One of its dining room suites has chairs priced at $400 each.

A few days ago the president of the company said in a letter: "We recruit most of our workers from the Blue Ridge mountains. Only there can we find young men schooled in the traditions of craftsmanship."

There is one such craftsman the company won't get. He lives in a little mountain town that has fewer than 500 people when the tourists leave in September, and his workshop is a weathered old house that sets back of a wide lawn, shaded by ancient trees, almost next-door to the church.

Here he makes carved mantels and picture frames and creates fine furniture out of black oak, walnut, cherry and mahogany. When he isn't busy making things to order, he gets the blueprints and copies pieces in the Metropolitan Museum.

When he finishes a piece of furniture, the back is no less beautiful than the front, for he works primarily for his own approval, as an artist, not for the beauty they created in museums.

A lady visitor once suggested to the young mountaineer that he might get rich by picking up battered antiques and repairing them. The idea troubled him. "I'm afraid you don't see what I am trying to do," he said. "I don't care to get rich. I'll be satisfied with a living if I can create beautiful things and make them as well as they can be made."

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"To go away is to die a little..."

With this issue our column leaves The Constitution after a two and a half year visit. If, like a country cousin, we have stayed too long, we have the excuse of love for a native Georgia and hunger for all the attention it will give. Even after we are gone from this place we are determined to go on observing and commenting upon things here in newspapers in the adjoining states. This city and state loom too big in the life of the south not to have an extra share of every earnest columnist's note, especially if he claims kin with everything in them.

In this day when nearly everybody writes a column or proposes we are grateful to Clark Howell for the long ride he has given us in "the south's standard newspaper." It needed more imagination than some of his compatriots possess to see that The Constitution has reason still to be "the south's newspaper" in spite of all the things that concentrate it upon its own locality and the others that attract it to the nation. Major Howell's decision, two and a half years ago, to carry this column in his paper was a comment not so much on merits of the column, but upon the value of a southern temperament and point of view at a time when the south is so much in the nation's eye and its own.

He had the imagination to see that what happens in Charlotte is worth discussion in Atlanta, that problems which beset Georgia beset Alabama, too. He had the background to remember that the south is still a place where so many people are kin to so many other people that personal mention in one place is newsworthy in another. He was newspaperman enough to know that romance and history and religion are things as interesting to southerners as politics and economics. And he was good citizen enough to see that a paper as powerful as his owes its column to more opinions than its own.

We take his ideal for our own. And even though we have not served it well or profited as we might from great opportunity, we shall go on trying. Circling the south constantly, talking to people in every state, reading southern newspapers and books in our spare time, we ought to write a better southern column than we do—and sooner or later, we shall.

Everywhere in our travels we find a special point of view about Atlanta. Atlanta, we hear, is no longer southern, its interests go either to itself or to affiliates in the north. Atlanta, we hear elsewhere, is so southern that to a greater extent than any other city, it harbors the evil of the south along with the good. Atlanta, we hear still elsewhere, is so proud that it is not in line, it disdains to take its great and proper place in the forward-marchings that go on below the Potomac. Always and everywhere, we hear Atlanta mentioned as a city successful and great, but either not of the south or not of the good south.

But we, who for two and a half years now have had letters and other messages from readers of this column here know that no matter what special groups and leaders may sometimes take Atlanta's name in vain, this is a city as intimately and nobly of the south as any in the land, as loyal to the old as alert to the new, as blessed with the culture, as gifted in the way. Bidding those readers good-bye, we suggest that they be more noisy, that they make enough noise to drown that of the provincials on the one hand and the super-cosmopolites on the other.

GOOD MORNING
By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"STRIKE A."

The best story, I thought, in any of the sermons or addresses during the Baptist World Alliance was the one Dr. Oscar Johnson told Friday night of the Idaho shepherd, living alone with his sheep in a distant valley, and having only the radio as a contact with his fellow men, and how this shepherd wrote to one of the radio entertainers, heard on a national chain daily, to say that his violin was out of tune and would the entertainer please have someone strike the chord A during a program so he might tune his violin. The request was gladly granted, and out across the hills and valleys to this lonely shepherd went the true note of a piano in New York city, by which the delicate strings of his violin were once again brought into accord.

"That," said Dr. Johnson, "is what this congress has done for the heart of humanity—it has sounded the true note of God's will for our day and generation and we shall go away, I believe, in accord with His purpose."

If the congress has done that for one listening heart, we shall all be fully compensated for the time and effort devoted to this delightful occasion. I am constrained to believe that such ministry has been rendered many hearts, which adds to our feeling of grateful and abiding satisfaction.

As the friends from many lands said good-bye, they invariably expressed appreciation for the fellowship which had come to their hearts—fellowship with God's people from many nations and races. And often they would say, "Our hearts have listened to the true note, and we go away with the deep assurance that we know Him and His will as never before."

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak in living echoes of Thy tone; As Thou has sought, so let me seek, Thy erring children lost and lone.

Oh, strengthen me, that while I stand Firm on the Rock, and strong in Thee, I may stretch out a loving hand To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

Oh, fill me with Thy fullness, Lord, Until my very heart o'er-flow In kindling thought and glowing word, Thy love to tell, Thy praise to show.

MARBURY, Ala., July 30.—(AP) J. W. Castleberry, 78, is not angry but a little vexed with the Birmingham News, which in an interview reported Castleberry hadn't shaved in nine years because his razor wore out and he "threw the dang thing away." Elder Castleberry forthwith penned a letter to The News: "I haven't used a curse word or a by-word in over 50 years. My children and my friends are jumping on me. I am not offended but you must correct that by-word." The News Retracted its "dang."

CLUB IS ORGANIZED
BY 17TH ENGINEERS

Charles A. Moran Is Elected Temporary Chairman of World War Group.

Surviving members of the Seventeenth United States Engineers, which was mobilized and drilled in Atlanta in 1917 before being sent overseas, effected permanent organization at a meeting Saturday night at the Ansley hotel.

The group, formerly known as the Last Man's Club of the Seventeenth Engineers, adopted as its permanent title the name of the Seventeenth Engineers' Association.

Election of officers was deferred. Temporary chairman is Charles A. Moran. Ernest C. Hynds was appointed temporary secretary.

The association will communicate with a unit of the Seventeenth Engineers organized in Columbus, Ohio, with the idea of patterning the local organization after it. Forty-two former members of the Seventeenth Engineers, many from out-of-town, attended the meeting Saturday night. Messages were sent to General Charles G. Dawes, former vice president, who served as a major with the outfit during the World War, and Colonel John E. Sewell, of Birmingham, Ala., commanding officer of the regiment.

AIR CORPS EXHIBIT TO COVER 4 STATES

'Open House' Is in Celebration of Army's First Plane Purchase in 1909.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 30.—(AP)—The army air corps "open house and exhibition" at its Maxwell field tactical school here will be stretched to cover parts of four states Wednesday.

The special air corps activity is in celebration of the army's first purchase of a military airplane, 30 years ago.

Latest developments in aerial warfare will be on exhibition here. Spectators will hear plane-to-ground conversations, and will see all types ships, anti-aircraft machine guns, bombs, engineering shops, map-making, radio equipment and intricate "blind flying" instruments among other things.

Four flights, reaching into Georgia, Florida and Mississippi are planned.

Leaving at 10 a. m., the first flight of nine pursuit planes will fly over Evergreen, 10:30; Brewton, 10:50; Pensacola, Fla., 11:20; Mobile, 11:50, and return to Maxwell field at 12:55 p. m.

The second flight, made up of six Martin bombers, will take off at 10:10 a. m., pass Moultrie, Ga., 11:20; Valdosta, Ga., 11:45; Jacksonville, Fla., 12:35 p. m.; Tallahassee, Fla., 1:45, and return to Maxwell field, 3:10.

Flight three, made up of three Douglas bombers, will leave at 10:20 a. m., pass over Opelika, 10:45; Lanett, 11:05; LaGrange, Ga., 11:20; Newnan, Ga., 11:40; Atlanta, Ga., 12:05 p. m.; Augusta, Ga., 1:15; Macon, Ga., 2:05, and return to Maxwell field, 3:20. Nine pursuit planes in flight four will leave at 10:30 a. m., pass Birmingham, 11:05; Tuscaloosa, 11:35; Meridian, Miss., 12:20 p. m.; Selma, 1:10, and return Maxwell field, 1:40.

(All times central standard.) The pursuit flights will be manned by 10 officers each, the bombardment group, by seven officers each.

HIGH KIWANIAN TO SPEAK.

O. E. Peterson, convention manager of Kiwanis International, will be the principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Atlanta Kiwanis Club at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the civic room of the Ansley hotel. Entertainment will consist of feats of legerdemain by Wilbur D. Doaks.

sweet time about catching the other car. Suppose, just for instance, you live in West End and are bound for the neighborhood of Ponce de Leon park—but just MUST stop downtown for an hour or so on the way. Formerly, this broken jump (because regular transfers don't permit stop-overs) would have cost you fifteen cents. Now, for a dime, you get your shoppers ticket—go to town—stop as long as you wish—then use your ticket and go merrily on your way, just so you catch your car before 4 P.M. Another nickel in the bank!

(4) You may use this ticket to go by one route and return by another. Your round trip doesn't necessarily have to be completed on the same line. Maybe, to choose another example at random, you live between the Peachtrees on the north side, close to both the Peachtree and the Buckhead line. You may go to town (or anywhere else it will take you) by one line and return by the other—all for a dime—by using the daily double shoppers ticket within its active hours, between 9 and 4.

Those are some chief uses—you undoubtedly will find others to suit your own demands and pleasures. In fact, you'll probably think of some we haven't even dreamed about.

You ride twice for a dime with the daily double—the thrifty new Mid-Day Shoppers Ticket—available on all lines with regular 7½-cent token fare—beginning August 1—between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M.—the best time of day to ride—plenty of seats—service fast and frequent—after the morning and before the evening rush hours.

The Mid-day Shoppers Ticket goes into effect on Tuesday—on approval. If you like it as we believe you will, and USE it—it will become a fixture, a bargain ride permanently at your service. We're putting it on trial. You're the judge and jury; your USE of it will be the verdict.

Sample its economy and flexible convenience. Begin right away to cash in on this daily double that gives you action for your money—that takes you there and brings you back for a dime!

FOR YOUR APPROVAL, beginning bright and early Tuesday, August 1—we offer you the daily double—the Mid-Day Shoppers Ticket.

At any time after 9 A.M., on any day except Saturday, you may board any city street car, bus or trackless trolley now using the 7½-cent token fare—pay the operator ten cents—and request a Mid-day Shoppers Ticket—and you have another ride coming to you (without transfer privileges)—provided only you use it before 4 P.M. of the same day you get your ticket. It's there for you if you want it; otherwise fares remain unchanged.

(1) You may use this ticket as a round-trip ticket. As its name suggests, this new ticket is primarily designed to give Atlanta women a bargain ride to town and back, with plenty of time to get in a good day's shopping. As a round-trip ticket (to town or anywhere else) it saves you one-third; there and back for a dime, instead of fifteen cents!

(2) You may use this ticket as a stop-over ticket. If, on your way to town (or anywhere else), you want to stop for a visit with a friend, to transact business or for any other reason—you may do so and then continue on to your final destination by using your shoppers ticket any time up to 4 P.M. Again you save a nickel!

(3) You may use this ticket as a transfer with stop-over privileges. Although you don't have transfer privileges on your shoppers ticket, you can use it AS a transfer and then take your own

O K STORAGE & TRANSFER CO., INC., IS STRONG IN PRESTIGE

FORMERLY WALKER,
NOW TIED IN WITH
3 LARGE CONCERNS

Backed by O K Companies in New Orleans, Memphis and Louisville, Ky.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

Combining its prestige and business responsibility, its reliable and dependable service, with other large storage and transfer companies in Memphis, New Orleans and Louisville, operated as O K Storage & Transfer, Inc., the Atlanta unit, known as O K Storage & Transfer Company, Inc., is ready to meet the big demand for storage and for moving vans that will soon be ushered in.

Even now, without waiting for the periodical moving season—September 1—the big storage company is keeping its forces well on the jump in moving scores of families and in storing household goods and office furniture. The O K Storage & Transfer Company, Inc., though operating for the past 13 years, since its establishment, as Walker Warehouses, Inc., is closely interwoven with the large and similar concerns of the same name in other southern cities. As a Walker concern it has made, and still holds, hundreds of friends and patrons. Even during all the time of its operations it has had the co-operation of, and been closely affiliated with, the big O K companies in the cities mentioned. Under those circumstances it was easy to glide into the O K business name here in Atlanta, and its oneness with the original O K companies gives to its patrons the still further assurance—if any were needed—of its responsibility and absolute dependence as a moving and storage concern. Back of every transaction—back of every contract—behind every promise made by the Atlanta concern—stands the permanency and the reliability of the O K Storage & Transfer Companies of Memphis, New Orleans and Louisville. These concerns have been in operation since 1911. They are known—and favorably and well known—all over the United States.

Their fleet of moving vans, their careful methods of storage, their co-operation with connecting links in long haulage, their absolute reliability, are the things which give to patrons a satisfied assurance, even in advance, of any contract or promise made.

The Atlanta unit—the O K Storage & Transfer Company, Inc.—though in effect a local concern, offers every advantage, assumes every responsibility just as the other O K storage concerns, because of their closely knit business relationship.

In charge of the Atlanta concern is H. M. Powell, who has been secretary-manager of the original companies for 15 years. His company here, just as are all the other

O K companies, is a member-agent of Allied Vans, Inc., and a member of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association. They are recognized as among the largest and most dependable among the 458 Allied Van member-agents in 257 cities and towns in the United States.

Located on Peachtree.

The Atlanta company is located in two large three-story fireproof buildings at 521-23-25 Peachtree street, corner of Merritts avenue, with frontage of about 150 feet on Peachtree and extending back 150 feet or more on Merritts avenue. The company, long operating as the Walker concern, has been in this building since it was established in 1926. The concern—now the O K—maintains an ample crew of experienced men—men who know how to wrap and carefully handle household goods and office furniture—how to prepare them for storage.

Household furniture—its moving and storage—is the exclusive work of the Atlanta company. It does no commercial hauling or storage, and the fact that it specializes only in household effects, together with office furniture, with men trained to handle articles as carefully and as delicately as it is humanly possible, makes for the surest sort of guarantee to patrons.

Short hauls of moving families over the city or long hauls to other cities or states is given the utmost of careful attention. Storage facilities are ample, and every household or office article of furnishings is carefully wrapped and stored at reasonable rates. Call on them or phone Main 2120 when service of this kind is needed.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
ON PEACHTREE ROAD
OPENS SEPT. 14

Washington Seminary Is Made Ready for Its Sixty-
Second Session.

Within about five weeks—September 14, to be exact—the 62nd session of Washington Seminary, historic and well-known preparatory school for girls, will open its doors to start its classes for pupils from all over the country.

This popular school occupies a group of colonial style buildings in the heart of fashionable Peachtree residential section, its five-acre campus being located at 1640 Peachtree road.

The enrollment, now almost complete, has been unusually heavy for the coming term, students from all parts of Georgia being enrolled, as well as hundreds that will come from distant states and some from foreign countries.

The school maintains a policy began some three or four years ago of including in its curriculum a secretarial course for high school graduates. This is intended to fit the young woman of fashion for a career as well as for the more traditional activities of seminary graduates.

For those interested in the fine arts excellent facilities are offered in dramatics, art with special emphasis upon commercial art, and the various branches of music—piano, violin, voice, the fretted instruments, harp.

Washington Seminary is a fully accredited school and member of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States. A large proportion of its graduates enter the various class "A" colleges in all parts of the country on its certificate.

The departments maintained by the seminary are kindergarten, grammar school, high school. Two courses leading to graduation—college preparatory to prepare students for admission to any college, and general course, which offers a wide range of elective subjects to meet the tastes and needs of the different types of students.

Booklet Warns
Of 'Flying Ants,' Is Sent Free

If you want to know how to watch out for "flying ants" and other pests that do so much damage to your home or commercial building, just drop a line, or phone the local Bruce Terminus Company, of which W. H. Sullivan is manager, at 109 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta. The booklet is free for the asking.

These "flying ants," which are swarming reproductives that usually emerge from their colonies each spring, are sometimes not noticed until the damage is done. Most people believe that the ants are not present unless seen, but this is not true. Many times the reproductives swarm to outside of buildings or in the unexcavated areas, unnoticed by the occupants.

The booklet, "How to Detect Termites," is a handy aid to property owners in making the discovery of termites before it is too late and the damage already done. The local Bruce Terminus Company will furnish this booklet to those who call or telephone their office. Mr. Sullivan will be glad to offer his aid in the control of the pest already damaging homes. Call Walnut 3131 or write Bruce Terminus Company, 109 Ponce de Leon avenue.

Motion picture producers in Mexico are seeking government aid.

SOUTHERN BUICK
SERVED VISITORS

Scores of Baptist Delegates
Called at Big Plant for Auto Service.

At no place in the city were the delegates and visitors to the Baptist World Alliance given a heartier welcome or received more courteous service than at the big business house and service plant of the Southern Buick Company, 230 Spring street, corner of Harris.

J. W. Lambert, the genial head of the company, let it be known that the latch string of the concern hung on the outside, and extended a sincere welcome to the visitors to drive in and let his plant give them any service needed.

Hundreds of the visitors to the city arrived by automobile, and a checkup shows that many, many scores of them came via Buick. It was not only to the drivers of Buick cars that Mr. Lambert extended an invitation to drop in for any service needed, but the drivers of any make of car. "No matter what the make of the car," said the head of the big concern, "we are prepared to remedy any trouble that might arise through the long drive, in many cases, to the city."

And so it was that scores of auto drivers visited the big plant. After all, the same welcome message is extended to all drivers throughout this entire territory.

Car owners will find Southern Buick one of the outstanding service stations of the entire country.

Everything needed in an automobile can be obtained from a cleaned spark plug to a rebuilt engine.

Mr. Lambert's organization is famed for the thoroughness with which work is turned out and there is no use of any automobile owner going to any other plant as all possible services can be obtained in this one building.

Brakes can be tested, lights scientifically adjusted to a state of perfection, machinery and engine checks, wheel checks, tire checks provided and all kinds of engine repairs and adjustments, as well as grease jobs can be supplied.

The type of service rendered automobile owners by Southern Buick has won a national reputation for this concern and all the company asks is a chance to demonstrate the value of this service to each individual car owner.

Chinese Fighting With Invaders Said To Have Revolted Against Officers.

SHANGHAI, July 31.—(Monday)—(AP)—Reports reaching Tsingtao, Shantung province port, from Tsimso, 40 miles to the north, said 4,000 Chinese who had been fighting with the Japanese had mutinied, killed six Japanese officers, captured four others and then joined Chinese national troops 100 miles away.
The Tsingtao-Tsimso railway was severed by guerrillas twice in the past week, once within 40 miles of Tsingtao.
Increased activity by the Chinese irregulars was ascribed to withdrawal of many Japanese troops from Shantung province for transportation to Manchoukou.

2 WHITFIELD BOYS WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

H. L. Boyd, B. F. Babb Awarded $100 Each by Georgia.
Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
DALTON, Ga., July 30.—Two Whitfield county boys, Hudson L. Boyd and B. F. Babb, of the Westside community, have been awarded scholarships of $100 each to the College of Agriculture at the University of Georgia. The scholarships were awarded on the basis of livestock production and scholastic and activity records in high school.
Boyd, a graduate of the 1939 class at the Westside High school, was valedictorian. Babb, also a Westside graduate, was a member of the upper third in his class. Both boys studied vocational agriculture and are members of the Future Farmers of America Club.

Roaches Around the Laundry Tubs?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep the floor under the tubs always clean and dry—free from dampness, soap chips, etc. That's what attracts bugs. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it behind the tubs and around the openings where the pipes go through the wall and floor. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. When roaches come out, give them another dose of powder. Third, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder in the path of roaches traveling. Repeat these directions at weekly intervals, and your laundry tubs will soon be free of roaches.
Bee Brand really kills roaches, ants and other crawling insects quick—in 240 seconds. It's safe to use around the house. In fact, on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.
NOTE: You can also kill roaches and ants as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

England Warned of I. R. A. 'Attacks'

Scotland Yard Hears of 'Terrifying' Reprisals by Battalion of 500 for Wholesale Expulsions.

LONDON, July 30.—(UP)—Scotland Yard today was warned of a "terrifying attack on England" by a battalion of 500 men of the outlawed Irish Republican army in reprisal for wholesale expulsions being carried out under Britain's new anti-terrorist law.
The warning, contained in an anonymous message, heightened fears of new bomb outrages and the full strength of Scotland Yard and the London police was held on the alert with all week-end leaves cancelled. Thousands of officers were deployed around strategic spots including government buildings, railroad stations and the homes of cabinet ministers.
The anonymous message warning of the "terrifying attack" coincided with statements in the British press that the I. R. A. has a large "expeditionary force," divided into bombing squads of 100 to 200 men each.
Newspapers openly charged that the Irish terrorists are being supported and financed in part by Germans. It was alleged that many Germans attended meetings to the Republican army's "declaration of war" on England. Disorders, heretofore largely confined to the large cities of England, spread to Glasgow today with rioting in the Gorbals district where two rival Irish gangs—"The Stickers" and "The Beehive Boys"—fought with bricks, bottles and iron bars.
When police intervened, the gangs joined in resisting the common enemy and there were pitched battles in the streets for two hours.

BRITAIN.
Big Flying Boat
Refuels in Air.
LONDON, July 30.—(AP)—Refueling in flight which British trans-Atlantic airlines plan to use when they inaugurate service next Saturday was demonstrated successfully today.
A 24-ton flying boat filled its tanks from a flying fuel tanker over Southampton. The boat let out a cable which was caught by another let down from the tanker. The boat then hauled in the cable which a pipeline was attached and took in 200 gallons of fuel.
Sir Alan Cobham, managing director of Flight Fueling, Ltd., said he hoped to establish deposits throughout the world to make possible 3,000-mile non-stop flights with large payloads.

GERMANY. Nazis Claim Air Records.

BERLIN, July 30.—(AP)—Germany today claimed three international air records for her air force after a two-motored Junkers bombing plane was timed over a distance of 2,000 kilometers (1,242 miles) at 501 kilometers (311 miles) an hour carrying a load of 2,000 kilograms (4,409 pounds).
Records for the same distance with a load of 1,000 kilograms (2,204 pounds) and without a load also were claimed for the plane.
Italy now holds the records with a speed of 468 kilometers (290 miles) an hour.

RUSSIA. Fascists Called Capitalist Fist

MOSCOW, July 30.—(AP)—Fascist nations were called "the clenched fist of the capitalist world against the U. S. S. R." today by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia in an article on the 25th anniversary of the World War.
Reasons for the 1914 conflict—rivalry over spheres of influence, territory, colonies and raw materials—are similar to those prevailing today, the paper said.
The article declared Britain before the war was overtaken by other countries, notably Germany and the United States, and the balance thus disturbed could be corrected only by war. The German position was said by Izvestia to be worse than in 1914 but the international situation also has some changes.
"A sixth part of the world has withdrawn from the system of world capitalism," declared Izvestia. "The very existence of the Soviet Union—of this mighty, invincible, fortress of Socialism—is a decisive power in the world, a factor which hinders development of a second World War."
"Of course the imperialist states obstinately try to find a way out of their contradictions through an anti-Soviet war."

Fliers Eulogized; Death Site Secret.
MOSCOW, July 30.—(AP)—Soviet newspapers today published eulogies of four prominent Russian airmen killed in the line of duty, but how or where, official announcements failed to disclose.
One theory advanced was that they had been killed in Outer Mongolia where Soviet forces are engaged in conflict with Japanese on the frontier of Manchoukou and Outer Mongolia.

BRESLAU, Germany, July 30.—(AP)—The Oder river, at its highest flood stage in history, spread devastation through Silesia tonight while emergency crews recruited from the army, labor service and police sought to save as much of the valley's harvest as possible.
A flood commission estimated 50,000 acres were flooded and the entire harvest destroyed in the Ratibor area, the first hit.
The entire upper valley of the Oder was under water with dozens of villages cut off.

FRANCE. 'Second Navy' Shaping Up.

PARIS, July 30.—(UP)—A powerful "second navy" for France, consisting of 83 warships totaling 340,000 tons is taking form rapidly and will be added to the fleet charged with maintaining French supremacy in the western Mediterranean, Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi told the United Press today in an exclusive interview.
Campinchi said the ships range from battleships and airplane carriers to submarines and the world's fastest destroyers.
France is aiming at a fleet of 750,000 tons, he explained, to consolidate her position as fourth-ranking world naval power which she is determined to hold at all costs against Italian and German challenges.
To meet the threat of the dictators' mass construction of submarines, France will concentrate on this arm until she has a modern fleet of 100 subsurface "wasps," the minister said.

Jap Girls Snub Anti-British Drive

TOKYO, July 30.—(AP)—Japan's anti-British campaign back-fired today on the Takarazuka Girls' opera troupe which returned recently from the United States.
The girls were asked to speak at an anti-British rally, but instead they went dancing at a Kyoto hotel with members of a visiting Canadian all-star basketball team.
Opera executives were summoned by the Tokyo gendarmerie for questioning and the girls' projected tour in China cancelled.

Franco Reported Ready To Take Back 50,000 of His Former Enemies.

HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier), July 30.—(AP)—Nationalist Spain was reliably reported today to have agreed to take back 50,000 former Republican militiamen from French concentration camps at the rate of 2,000 daily beginning this week. While the agreement was confirmed immediately by officials, Generalissimo Franco was said in these reports to have consented to the return of these refugees as a result of France's action last week in handing over Spanish gold deposited in French banks by the former Republican regime.
About 300,000 refugees have remained in France since the Catalan defeat early this year and have been fed and housed in concentration camps. They have been returning to Spain at an average of only about 500 a week.

PACT ABROGATION LAID TO JOINT PLAN

Gayda Charges Agreement Reached Between London, Washington Long Ago.

ROME, July 30.—(AP)—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, asserted today the denunciation by the United States of the 1911 American-Japanese commercial treaty was the result of a joint British-American plan.
Despite Secretary of State Hull's statement that neither Great Britain nor France had been informed in advance of the American move, Gayda insisted in La Voce D'Italia that "everything proves that an agreement between Washington and London was reached long ago."
"The unforeseen intervention of Roosevelt, which was not provoked by any immediate threat to American interests," he wrote, "brings the concerted maneuver between Washington and London out into the light of the sun."
He charged that the agreement between the United States and British governments to exchange cotton for rubber for war reserves was a preliminary arrangement in the "maneuver," providing a substitute for Japan's purchases of American cotton.

Will Dorothy Lamour Avoid Sarong In "Blue Hawaii"?

By Sheila Graham.

In Dorothy Lamour's next picture, "Blue Hawaii," her famous sarong would be very appropriate. Will she achieve her wish to be done with all things even a resembling sarongs and wear lovely clothes like this, or will she revert to that very becoming attire—the sarong?

HOLLYWOOD, July 30.—Bing Crosby goes down to the sea in technicolor for "Blue Hawaii," his next but one for Paramount. He also goes to Honolulu for the picture, which is a sort of sequel to "Waikiki Wedding," made two years ago by Bing and one of the biggest money-makers for Paramount in recent years. Dorothy Lamour gets the feminine lead opposite Bing—and you can be sure there will be plenty of sarongs in the picture. Dorothy also gets the leading lady chore with Crosby in the forthcoming "Road to Mandalay."

Peter Lorre, now free-lancing, is trying to sell himself, with a pleasant little story titled "Jack the Ripper" to a major studio. . . . George Brent and Bette Davis get together again for "One-Way Passage," the remake of the film starring William Powell and Kay Francis. . . . Judith Anderson, famous stage star, gets the role of Mrs. Danvers in "Rebecca." Choice of leading lady for Laurence Olivier is currently between Vivien Leigh and Joan Fontaine. . . . Olivia De Havilland gets a better break with the lead in "Saturday's Children," from the play by Maxwell Anderson. . . . Claude Rains plays the title role in the Warner movie biography of Edgar Allan Poe.

Franchot Tone follows Robert Montgomery and Melvyn Douglas as Marco Paga in "Fast and Furious." Otto Kruger joins Powell and Myrna Loy in "Another Thin Man." . . . Robert Taylor and Greer Garson have strong support in "Remember," with Lew Ayres, Billie Burke and Laura Ayres. . . . All the major studios are bidding for the Dixie Davis story now running in a national weekly magazine. Warner want it for Cagney, Paramount for Lloyd Nolan, and Metro thinks it would be just the thing for Clark Gable. . . . Ben Turpin continues his picture comeback in completion of "Hollywood Cavalcade," the cross-eyed comedian plays a part in "Kid Nightingale."

The out-of-town sneak preview of "The Women" is the reason behind all those big, happy smiles at Metro. . . . C. Aubrey Smith, who will never see 70 again, is working in three pictures all at the same time—"Another Thin Man," "Eternally Yours" and "Babala." . . . Jackie Coogan gets a bit role in "Silly Patrol," chief of the Tailspin Tommy pictures starring ex-Aviator John Trent. . . . The Marx Brothers have been included in the title of "A Day at the Circus." It will now be called "The Marx Brothers at the Circus."

It's nice work if you can get it. I refer to the legal decision awarding Elaine Barrie $500 a week for the run of "My Dear Children," the estranged husband John Barrymore is touring. It might be cheaper to have her back in the cast. Or would it be?

Nomination for the luckiest film-ite of the week—Bob Hope, who is reported to have received a Grade A round-trip ticket to Europe, plus $25,000, from his grateful radio sponsor. . . . Orson Welles is in town for his four-way contract—producer, director, star and writer—at RKO-Radio. . . . Dick Powell and Mary Martin are handling over a Broadway play prospect for the fall.

"Lover Come Back to Me" reunites Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. . . . Universal is offering Maureen Dietrich $50,000 and a percentage of the profits—if any—on a one-picture deal. . . . Miriam Hopkins' second picture for Warner—"All This and Heaven, Too," replacing Bette Davis. George Brent plays opposite. . . . The Otto Kahn estate on Long Island, recently purchased as a rest home for the street cleaners of New York city, will be glorified by Fox in "White Wings in Clover." . . . Shirley Temple will be teamed with Al Jolson in a forthcoming, as-yet-untitled film.

Charming Frock For Growing Girls

By Barbara Bell.

Girls who are growing fast, and inclined to be a bit ungainly, have to be very carefully dressed in order to avoid having people point out that they are "just at the awkward age." Well, nobody will say about the young lady who wears this soft, pretty dress (1793-B). The bodice is full and bloused, the sleeves puffed, in order to have the necessary filling-out effect, which is emphasized by the flaring of the paneled skirt. The square neckline has a narrow ribbon drawn through a casing and is brought around from the back of the neck and ties in a bow in front—bows and ribbons at the sleeves, a big shawl bow at the back, provide just the right sort of dainty trimming.

Make the frock of voile, handkerchief linen or batiste, and repeat it, in the fall, in youthful silks.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1793-B is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 3 1/2 yards of 35-inch fabric. 2 1/2 yards narrow ribbon required for bows on neck and sleeves.

Send for Barbara Bell's Spring and Summer Pattern Book! Make your own smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, carefully planned designs! It's chic, it's easy, it's economical to sew your own. Each pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

MY DAY Always Be Polite To Traffic Police

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—At last we have had a little gentle rain. Of course, it wouldn't satisfy either the farmers or the garden lovers, but it is a help. For that reason, I didn't complain at all when I found myself driving through a misty rain most of the time yesterday afternoon, which, around Brewster, N. Y., developed into a regular down-pour for about half an hour.

For weeks we have been promising ourselves a drive through Connecticut and a visit with our friends, Esther Lape and Elizabeth Read, in Westbrook, Conn., but one thing and another has turned up and we kept putting it off. I looked at Miss Thompson's desk and at mine yesterday and realized what one day of neglect could do. I was almost inclined to think that it was better never to leave home. But after lunch we did get off at 3 o'clock.

Remembering last year's devastation from the hurricane, I was agreeably surprised to find how quickly nature heals her scars. Even in the villages where there used to be a continuous line of old trees, there seemed to be a few old ones left and the young ones are coming up, so that the village greens will soon be shaded again.

Miss Lape and Miss Read have done wonderful things in clearing fallen trees from their woods, but it was a sad sight to see one giant maple completely prostrate and many great branches torn away from the oaks and larger maples. Miss Lape and I walked down through their woods to a place where they have built a rustic table. They have a nice view out from under the trees across the marshland to the gently moving marshy river and I don't wonder that they enjoy going down there for lunch.

We had a very pleasant evening and got up at an early hour this morning and left for the homeward drive at 8:15. I find New Haven, Conn., perfectly impossible to get through without being lost, so we tried a road which is a little longer but completely escapes New Haven. It took us no longer to get home.

I suppose I had better make a confession. I was stopped by a highway patrol officer yesterday. My boys have always said that it would give them great satisfaction if I would be arrested and I think yesterday I came very near receiving more than the gentle reprimand which was given to me. I had been talking and apparently not watching my speedometer, so I was firmly convinced that I had never gone over 45, and the patrol officer quite as firmly told me I was going 60, and that 50 was "tops" for a rainy day on those roads. I was most humble about it, for when you are in the wrong you might as well own up to it, even when it is unintentional. I was sent on my way a much chastened and more careful individual, by a very polite but firm gentleman.

Now we are back and the desks look even more cluttered than they did yesterday, so I'd better get to work.

Girls Minus Come-Hither Go In Search of Love

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: Among the many puzzling things in this life, none is more so to me than fine women who go through life without any opportunity of marriage. For instance, I have a neighbor who is all a man could ask in a wife and yet she's never had a date I don't know it. She's a devoted daughter, considerate and good natured, and all the things that make a woman desirable. She has a domestic experience that would fit her for homemaking. She has been a teacher and business executive in camps and also has had a little office experience. Anybody would consider her a charming woman, handsomely and well-groomed, but for some reason the men haven't seen her. Now why is it? How can an admiring neighbor help her to find the happiness she deserves? A NEIGHBOR.

Answer: "Full many a flower is blown and blighted." Don't you think that family conditions are frequently responsible for the unseen maidens' plight? Take a home where the mother hasn't any conception of her duty to create a social life for her child, unless the child herself is sociable and knows how to reach out and attach young people to her while she's young, the habit of going home to mama is formed and fixed before she realizes it.

Then there's the octopus mother who slowly encircles her daughter, sucking the very life out of her until the child ceases to make effort to escape. I shall never forget hearing an attractive young woman say that when she pulled down her desk and thought how nice it would be to stay up town for dinner and go to the movie afterward, she could see her mother's eager face pressed against the pane waiting for her to come home, and the vision made her ashamed of her wish to play hooky.

It sometimes happens that there's a family skeleton hidden in the closet which makes a girl super-sensitive; a drunkard father, or extreme poverty, affliction of one sort or another. Sometimes other sisters are more attractive, grab the spotlight and leave one girl in the shadow. As the twig is bent you know, and if a girl comes backed over her early failures, she gives up hope, ceases to consider herself in the running and when this happens the invitation fades out of her eyes. Men don't see women who don't invite looks.

Finally, we must admit that Fate plays a big part in the love and marriage game. Propinquity, the most probable cause, isn't always provided and if a gal hasn't the sixth sense (and the boldness) necessary to locate the prospects and provide her own propinquity, she's out of luck. Here's where family and friends can help the timid one; putting her next to likely prospects.

Believe me, the gals are up and doing today and from here out there will be fewer maidens who've never had dates. The gals are asking for dates, offering to pay half the expense of keeping them—in a pinch they'll pay the total. So here's hoping that in the next generation we'll be shedding tears over the men that missed, rather than over maidens that missed.

Alternate: A man isn't essential to a maiden's happiness but she isn't happy until she finds the man or divines this truth.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Letters unsuitable for publication will be answered personally provided they contain stamped, self-addressed envelopes. All names are held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Women, men have hinted, are thoughtless smokers. A sure charm destroyer, they say, is for their lovely ones to blow cigaret smoke in their attentive eyes.

Unbalanced Diet Impairs Condition of Teeth

By Ida Jean Kain.

Even with nine out of every 10 children suffering from sort of dental disease, this country ranks number one in dental health and, by comparison, the teeth of people in other countries seem deplorably bad. In Halifax, Nova Scotia, the other day, I could not help noticing the children on the streets. I did not see one child with really good teeth.

From its extensive surveys, the Greater New York Bureau of Dental Infirmary is inclined to place the bulk of the blame for poor teeth on poor nutrition. But nutrition takes in everything from minerals and vitamins to sunshine!

The vital role diet plays in dental health has been demonstrated beyond any doubt. In the few years that the English school children have been supplied with milk, there has been a remarkable improvement in the condition of their teeth. Milk is richly valuable for its high calcium content but it also contains phosphorus, both minerals essential to good bones and teeth.

The explanation of the exceptionally healthy teeth of children coming from the southern European countries, however, is found in the sunshine! The action of the sun's rays on the skin forms vitamin D and this vitamin is essential to the utilization of calcium. It might be that the prevalence of fog during the spring and fall actually cuts down the natural sunlight to such an extent that the teeth of Nova Scotians would be affected. The same thing is true of England and parts of our own country.

The remedy for lack of sunshine is a dietary one. . . . if you cannot get enough sun, you can take cod-liver oil or one of the concentrates such as voilerol or haliver oil. Adults should have a pint of milk a day. Growing children need three or four glasses and either plenty of sun or a teaspoon of cod-liver oil daily.

Besides vitamin D, two others—A and C—are involved in dental health. Vitamin A strengthens resistance to infection and promotes a healthy condition of the tissues. Richest sources of butters, cream, whole milk, cod-liver oil, carrots and spinach. Vitamin C is so important that the teeth are very quickly affected by a shortage. This vitamin protects the soft tissues of mouth and gums. Richest sources of C are the citrus fruits, oranges, grapefruit and lemons, which may be canned or fresh. Pineapple juice and tomato juice, either canned or fresh, are also good sources, and the cabbage is very high in C. For an adequate intake of this vitamin you should have daily one-half glass of orange or grapefruit juice, or one glass of pineapple juice, or one and one-half glasses of tomato juice.

Dentists tell us we are losing our teeth because we eat too many soft foods. In short, we do not make use of our teeth, and what we do not use we lose. There should be some hard foods in the menu, such as hard breads and rolls and the tough skins of baked potatoes, to exercise the teeth and strengthen the tissues of the mouth.

"The Protective Diet Chart" tells you just which foods contain the elements essential to your well-being. Send a stamped return envelope to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

To Control Suit of Opponent Use 'Cue' Bid

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Bidding a suit previously named by an opponent is a useful bit of strategy usually employed as a "cue" bid to indicate control of opponent's suit and to force partner for at least one more round of bidding, as:

SOUTH WEST NORTH
1 H 1 S 2 S
There are occasions, however, when such a call signals a genuine desire to play the contract in adversary's named-suit, but there is seldom any excuse for confusion between partners, for it will only occur after:

(1) Bidder or partner has previously bid a takeout double, and it still rare, cases a penalty double.

(2) Either partner bids opponent's suit after having passed on the first round of bidding.

South, for example, opens the bidding one heart, holding:

S—A Q J 10 7 5 C—K J 10
West holds:
S—K J 8 D—K Q 7
H—A Q J 8 6 C—A 3

South took West's bid "right out of his mouth," so to speak. West does the next best thing and doubles for a takeout. North passes and East shows his best suit, diamonds. If South, the original bidder, now passes and West, the takeout doubler, bids hearts, it is a bona fide declaration and not a control bid.

The same holds true, if partner of the takeout-doubler bids opponent's suit, although it is usually smarter to leave the double stand for penalties.

Assume the bidding goes:
SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1 H 1 S 2 D Double
P 2 H D—A 5 4 2
West holds:
S—K J 8 D—K Q 7
H—A Q J 8 6 C—A 3

East's double of North's two-diamond bid is a penalty double because East's partner has bid. West's rebid of two hearts indicates a genuine desire to play the contract in hearts, which was South's bid-suit.

Be on the alert for similar situations which may occur as in the following bidding sequence:
SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1 H P 1 NT P
P 2 H
West's two-heart bid is not a "control" bid because both East and West passed at first opportunity to bid.

Healthy Stomach Is Never Empty

By Dr. William Brady.

Contrary to the popular notion the stomach is not a hollow empty structure (between meals) which will hold a quart or so when filled to capacity. It is rather a wide place in the alimentary canal, and when no food or liquid is passing through the stomach walls are firmly in apposition, so that there is no yawning space not filled with food, water, air, gas or whatever has been left lying about. Nor has the stomach that conventional saddle shape the old time books, charts or manikins depicted. It is more than shape of a cowhorn with the wide part at the top, the apex or tip of the horn toward the right.

The fasting stomach has rhythmic variations in tone at the rate of three a minute, approximately; then at irregular intervals a series of more powerful contractions occur, these contractions lasting perhaps 30 seconds, and producing the sensation of hunger, the pangs or pains of hunger, not just appetite or desire for food.

When food enters the stomach it does not, therefore, drop into a cavernous tank, with a resounding splash, but is received by successive gulps or morsels as swallowed. As the bolus or morsel arrives at the entrance to the stomach (cardia) some five seconds after swallowing, it is momentarily arrested by the tightly pursed sphincter or top of the stomach, which presently relaxes somewhat, permitting the bolus to pass slowly through.

When the bolus has been passed through the cardia or gateway to the stomach (called cardia because it is the base of the stomach nearest the heart—irritation of this portion by excessive acidity produces the symptom called "heartburn") it still remains closely grasped by the stomach, along with other food, liquid or gas. It is not until the stomach has completed its churning process of digestion. Successive peristaltic contractions squeeze the bolus along toward the lower gateway or outlet (pylorus) of the stomach, but the pyloric sphincter (purse string) muscle keeps the opening closed until the food in the stomach has been well churned and converted into a thin liquid mass called chyme. The food may be churned back and forth in the stomach many times before it becomes chyme. Then the pylorus relaxes enough to permit the chyme to pass into the duodenum. At no time during digestion is any large volume of chyme so ejected from the stomach—just a small amount at a time, and its place in the stomach is immediately taken up by other food not yet quite ready. Probably the normal acidity (hydrochloric acid) of the gastric juice aids in opening the pylorus so that the chyme may pass into the duodenum; and probably this is the function of the stomach to close and keep closed the pylorus until the acidity is neutralized by the alkalinity of the pancreatic juice and bile.

This will be sufficient physiology to indicate the importance of tone, the elasticity, resiliency, vigor of involuntary muscle in the wall of stomach, duodenum and entire length of the alimentary canal.

on my face, and though it's recommended for such use, I'm leaving that to your judgment and experience, though I should think with the dandy job it does on legs and underarm, it would be all right for facial use as well.

If you are one of those persons whose summer delight is swimming, play suits, etc., and you are troubled with unwanted hair, then I would suggest that you try this fluffy, soft white cream which, I understand, is named for a 13th century queen known as the Cleopatra of the Caucasus. She and the ladies of her court, so the story goes, devoted many leisurely hours to the care of their loveliness, and used natural muds for removing unwanted hair from their bodies.

If you'll phone me, I'll give you the name of this cream depilatory, and tell you where you may purchase it in Atlanta. If you do not live in the city, write me enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

I was skeptical at first, but while fussing around my room one early morning decided to see just what it would do for—against—me. Spreading it with its accompanying wooden spatula over a small area of one of my legs I actually forgot about it until I started to take my bath some time later. That's proof number one that it doesn't burn or irritate, and that the usual disagreeable odor is absent.

After I rinsed it away my skin was soft and smooth, and minus the fuzz that was there before. Doesn't this sound worth while your trying? I haven't used it

Suppose television were possible with letters—and when friends opened letters from us—there we were! How careful we'd be to act our best, look our best!

Absurd? But much the same thing happens. When an ill-bred personality emerges from a letter on a ruled sheet of notebook paper, bristling with scratches and errors, and showing plainly the writer knows nothing of good form.

And from a well-mannered letter—written on correct, unruled stationery—what a charming, smartly groomed person comes to your mind's eye!

Yes, worth while to "know better" in letters! Instead of writing on one line the salutation and the beginning of a note, write them on different lines. Instead of abbreviations such as "Aug." write out names, dates and places. And with a little care, you can avoid writing "their" when you mean "there."

Beginning a letter with a rubber-stamp remark, "How have you been?" is a habit easy to break, too. And by brushing up on good form, you avoid such social slips as writing invitations without a hint as to clothes, plans, train times.

Write naturally, gaily, but correctly! "A house party is brewing for the week end—can you join us? There'll be tennis, swimming and a dance at the club. Try to make the 10 o'clock train on Saturday morning, the 12th. Dick and Sally will drive you back on Sunday evening."

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Trim, Tailored With Clear-Cut Lines

By Lillian Mae.

Smart and simple enough for any taste is this youthful Lillian Mae shirtwaister, with its clear-cut lines. Buy some cool cotton or non-crushing line. . . . order pattern 4163 for the very day. . . . and with the sewing instructor's clearly illustrated aid, you'll have a fresh new frock in no time! See how the front yoke is nicely gathered for softness. The breezy, flared skirt is cut in just four easy pieces. Make the neck low and cool, and tuck it with a tailored, pointed collar. You might add ruffled edging for a note of gay femininity on collar, cuffs and even down the amusingly shaped bodice opening. Why not make several of this style for fresh changes!

Pattern 4163 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards 39-inch fabric and 3 3/8 yards lace edging.

Send 15 cents (15c) in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Groom-Elect Announces Betrothal Before Journalism Class in Athens

By Sally Forth.

THERE is an interesting and romantic story concerning the announcement of the engagement and the approaching marriage of Grace Arrington, of Rome, to Willett M. Kempton, of Athens. The ceremony, you know, takes place next Saturday in Rome.

Grace attended the University of Georgia last year and one of her special courses was in journalism. A story-book romance could not have had a more intriguing setting, for none other than Willett Kempton instructed the embryo journalists.

The story goes, so Sally hears, that last spring at the close of the college year, Mr. Kempton stood before his class and said:

"I have especially enjoyed teaching this class during the past year, and I regret that we will have to part for the summer, for it means that I will not see any of you again. However, there is one member of the class whom I shall see, for she is to become my bride. She is Miss Grace Arrington."

This was the first announcement of their engagement and the classmates of the pretty bride-elect were so thrilled over the coming event that they returned to class the following day, minus books, but laden with all manner of kitchen gifts. Then and there they staged a surprise shower for their teacher and classmate, even though their classes were not officially over.

ANN Bell, whose marriage to Sterling Rogers, of Chicago, will be a social event of fall, leaves tomorrow for Highlands, N. C., to visit her aunt, Mrs. H. D. Randall, of Cincinnati, at her attractive summer home there. Ann will be accompanied by her sister, Helena.

The belle's grandmother, Mrs. George Bell Sr., is already at Highlands, where she spends every summer with her daughter, Mrs. Randall. Another aunt, Mrs. J. S. Daniel, of New York, will also be present, and will join enthusiastically in the "trousseau talk" that is certain to predominate conversation.

Ann and Helena will enjoy boating, tennis, swimming and fishing, after which they will return here in order that the former may assemble her bridal attire.

DO you know: That Randy and Catherine Campbell Hearst are building a handsome new home on Pace's Ferry road. . . . That a prominent Athens belle's engagement to a popular Marietta will be announced on Sunday week. . . . That three prospective debutantes for the coming season are contemplating journeying to New York to "acquire glamour" before making their bows. . . . That one of Atlanta's most attractive widows is rumored engaged to a tall, dark and handsome admirer. . . . That Waldo Jones is building an attractive home on Redland road, where he and his fiancée, Elissa Woodford, will reside after their marriage. . . . That a popular out-of-town belle, who made her debut in this city, will soon become the bride of an attractive south Georgian.

That Mr. and Mrs. Clark Smith leave September 3 to make their home in Hartford, Conn. . . . That Mr. and Mrs. Gus Black depart September 1 for Columbia, S. C., to make their home?

Miss Howell Plans

Party for Miss Krueger

Miss Alvarine Howell will be hostess Tuesday evening at her home, complimenting Miss Virginia Krueger, lovely bride-elect of Decatur, with a shower. Miss Lillian Wyche Howell will assist her sister in entertaining.

Present will be Misses Krueger, Sara Hester, Helen Allen, Laura Langley, Mary Langley, Rose Anne Taylor, Sara Whisnant, Lillian Flowers, Helen Timberlake, Luntrell Martin, Elizabeth Sykes, Mesdames Finley Crippen, Lena Estes, Ludwig Krueger, A. L. Krueger, A. E. Moore, L. W. Howell, George Krueger, D. I. Tignor and W. D. Langley.

Garden Club Members Exhibit Arrangements At Garden Center

Last week, Stone Mountain Club members demonstrated their study of flower arrangements with several exhibits including a low bowl for the mantle or Fantasy zinnias in xanthic colors. A vase of lavender scabiosa and statice created a harmonious combination, while marigolds in pale and deeper tones and bolonia were grouped in a yellow pottery container. Other summer flowers from members' gardens were artistically arranged.

Sprays of Lilium Speciosum Rubrum with crimson dotted petals were brought by members of the Mimosa Garden Club, carrying out their program of summer flowering bulbs. A freak stalk of this same lily was exhibited by Mrs. Hampton Sewell, of Temple, with 50 blossoms and buds growing on the single stem.

For Club Estates Garden Club, Mrs. Frank Kemp selected red zinnias and tansy for the mantle, also combining hardy phlox and Buddlei Pink Charming for another arrangement. Handsome spikes of Picardy gladioli in a cylindrical glass container were exhibited by Mrs. Thomas Roberts, of the garden division of the Garden Hills Woman's Club.

Miniature arrangements were featured by the East Point garden division. A pair of tiny white and gold cornucopias held sprigs of bolonia and ageratum while a pair of Delph blue urns were filled with the tassel flower and feverfew. Small vases and pitchers were used for other dainty blossoms.

Vines predominated in the niche arrangements of the Decatur garden division. An unglazed green urn held southern smilax, artemisia, with montbretias for accent while trailing nasturtiums were effectively combined with the smilax for the other niche.

Recent visitors were Mesdames William Wood, R. A. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. George Nutting, of Macon; S. T. Combs, of Elberton; W. F. Parker, H. H. Word, Carrollton; Hampton Sewell, Betty Ann Sewell, of Temple; John Morris Jr., Smyrna; Mamie C. Barry, of Rome; J. C. Miller, Miss Merle Wolff, Myrtlewood, Ala.; C. C. Cromwell, Rock Hill, S. C.; O. N. Due, of Montgomery, Ala.; Mary E. Hubbell, of Bristol, Conn.; D. C. Drono Sr., of Tampa, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McHaffey have returned to their home in Apopka, Fla., after having visited Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Clyatt on Mount Perrin road.

Miss Mary E. Gregory is at home at 826 Peachtree street, after having spent June and July in Atlantic City.

Travis Brannon Jr. is in St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is visiting his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Max Cherry.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Godley have returned from New York City where they visited the World's Fair.

Dr. and Mrs. Roger W. Dickson and their young daughter, Boyce, have returned from London, Ontario, Canada, where they visited Mrs. Dickson's mother, Mrs. George Boyce.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Franklin Pierce announce the birth of a son on July 25 at Crawford W. Long hospital, whom they have named Alton Franklin Jr. Mrs. Pierce is the former Miss Grace Elora England.

Miss Laura Thornton, of Jonesboro, is convalescing from a recent illness at Crawford W. Long hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. John William Clapp announce the birth of a daughter at the Crawford W. Long hospital on July 25, who has been named Patricia Alice. Mrs. Clapp is the former Miss Ruby Ruth Dampier.

Miss Mildred Thigpen, promiscuously connected with the state motor license department and member of the First Baptist church, has returned from New York City, where she visited the World's Fair. Before returning to Atlanta Miss Thigpen visited in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Robert Hogg and Mrs. John Stiga have returned from El Paso, Texas, where they visited the former's mother, Mrs. H. W. Kilbourne.

Miss Dorothy Moore Marries Maurice M. Sponcler in Newnan

Mrs. Maurice Moncrief Sponcler, of Newnan.

MRS. MAURICE MONCRIEF SPONCLER, OF NEWNAN.

NEWNAN, Ga., July 30.—Enlisting wide interest is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Dorothy Moore, of Newnan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Moore, of Thomasville, N. C., to Maurice Moncrief Sponcler, son of Mrs. F. A. Arnall, of this city, and the late Maurice Sponcler. The ceremony was quietly solemnized this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the study of Central Baptist church here, Rev. Ronald C. S. Young, D. D., officiating.

The attractive bride attended Salem College, in Winston-Salem, N. C., where she received a bachelor's degree. She later received a degree as master of sacred music at Union Theological Seminary, in New York, and is now a minister of music at Central Baptist church here.

The groom graduated from Georgia Tech, where he was prominent in numerous campus activities, and where he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Sponcler will reside here, where they will be popular additions to the young married set. Mr. Sponcler is connected with Arnall Mills in Sargent, N. C.

Miss Helen Lucile Moses Marries Louis Regenstein Jr. in Sumter, S. C.

SUMTER, S. C., July 30.—Miss Helen Lucile Moses, of this city, became the bride of Louis Regenstein Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., at a quiet ceremony solemnized this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Graham Moses, here. Characterized by beauty and dignity, the marriage service was performed in the presence of only the immediate families of the bride couple.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by her father, William Graham Moses, and there were no attendants. For her wedding, Miss Moses chose a becoming model of Capri blue crepe with which she wore a matching hat and navy accessories. A shoulder cluster of white orchids completed her costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kagey are visiting in Syracuse, N. Y., and in New York city.

James Taylor Williams is convalescing from a recent appendix operation at Piedmont hospital.

Mrs. Earl Hirsch is in Jacksonville, Fla., where she will spend several weeks with Mrs. Moe Schaffer, and will be joined later by Mr. Hirsch.

Frank Corrigan and C. J. Sullivan leave on August 5 for a cruise to Bermuda and Quebec aboard the S. S. Corinthian.

HEIDT —Minus the services of their leader, Horace Heidt, who is recovering from an emergency appendectomy performed after his "Answers to the Dancers" program, Heidt's orchestra will sing and play during the broadcast of "Could Be," during the broadcast to be heard over WSB at 8:30 o'clock tonight.
Couples dancing in the air-cooled studio will be invited to participate in the novel question-and-answer contest. Larry Cotton, tenor; Lysbeth Hughes, singing harpist; the four Heidt-fives, quartet; and Bob McEld, bass, will be featured soloists with the orchestra.
MAGIC KEY —Helen Jepson, soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the featured guest on the Magic Key program during its broadcast to be heard over WAGA at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Miss Jepson will sing several arias accompanied by the concert orchestra, under the baton of Nathan Shilkret.
A demonstration of the story-tune piano, an innovation in musical instruments, will be given by Rosa Rio, concert pianist. Colonel Stimpert as master of ceremonies and the Rodgers Sisters, song and patter team in another "Rhyming the News" specialty, complete the cast.
Mrs. George Installed Auxiliary Commander
Mrs. L. C. George was installed as commander of the Women's Auxiliary to the Betty Harrison Jones Chapter No. 1 of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War at a luncheon held Saturday at the Henry Grady hotel, having been unanimously re-elected to this post.
Installing officer was Mrs. Robert Williamson Jr., a past commander of the auxiliary. Other officers installed were: Mrs. E. P. James, senior vice commander; Mrs. R. C. Garrett, junior vice commander; Mrs. Ella Barney, treasurer; Mrs. E. C. Pritchett, chaplain; Mrs. Hettie G. Holyfield, adjutant; Mrs. Lois Petty, historian; Mrs. Hattie Rozetta, sergeant-at-arms; Miss Claudia Eubanks, patriotic instructor; Miss Mary Ladshaw, conductress; and Mrs. Eula Finch, musician.
This organization is very active in hospital, relief and child welfare work, confining its activities mainly to the veterans and their families. The accomplishments of the auxiliary for the past year were given in the reports by the retiring committee chairman, and the combined value of the work was $553.15. The auxiliary also contributes to the National Educational Loan Fund, National Rehabilitation Fund, and the leper colony. The amount so contributed was approximately $50.
The national convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War convenes in Boston, Mass., on July 29, and the delegates attending from the Atlanta unit are Mrs. L. C. George, Mrs. Robert Williamson Jr., Mrs. L. S. Bellinger and Mrs. E. P. James.
The next meeting takes place Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Henry Grady hotel.

YANKEES DIVIDE 2 WITH CHISOX; HUTCHINSON WINS

Jimmy Foxx Bats in Four Runs as Boston Beats Browns, 6 to 4.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The Chicago White Sox defeated the New York Yankees 1-1 in the nightcap to divide a doubleheader yesterday, after losing the first game to the champions, 4-3.

The Yankees won the first game after George Selkirk slammed a homer in the second inning with two on to give them a lead they never lost.

The Boston Red Sox's slugger, first baseman, Jimmy Fox, cocking his batting eye on center field after going hitless for two days, slammed out his 25th home run and accounted for four markers as he paced the Sox to a 6-to-4 triumph over the St. Louis Browns.

A Boston crowd of 9,000 saw the Sox take their only game of the three-game series from the lowly Browns and repeatedly cheered fox's' stickwork. Jimmy got under way in the third inning when he was lifted from the field and replaced by home run king Lou Finney, who had singled. The American league home runner added another round-tripper to his string in the fifth with a bang, empty and his single off the left center fielder wall scored one of Boston's three runs in the sixth inning.

St. Louis got eight hits, three by Joe Grace, off the winning pitcher, Dennis Galehouse.

Although knocked out in the eighth, Freddy Hutchinson won his first major league baseball game today as the Detroit Tigers beat the Athletics, 5 to 3, to take both ends of a double-header. Detroit's opener, 14-0, behind Buck Newsome.

The Washington Senators defeated Cleveland, 5 to 2, when Joe Kraskauskas held the Indians in check after his teammates put on a four-run rally in the fourth.

TIGHT IN PINCHES.

Big Besse didn't exactly handcuff the Crackers, who left nine men on bases, but he didn't do much more than give them opportunities. When the clock quainties. When the clutch came he had his fast ball zipping and an occasional curve to do some baffling. The Crackers' six hits were scattered through four innings and sprung from six bats.

Atlanta got ahead for the second time in the series in the first inning of the second game with Doyle, wild as the west wind, walking four men, the last to Peters, forcing in Mailho. Then he fanned Rucker, but the Crackers fell on him violently two innings later. Mauldin's pop fly fell back of Doyle for a hit and it meant two bases when Piet threw the ball past first. Duke singled Mauldin home and Burge singled Duke to third, Willie counting as Peters hit into a double play.

then Duke singled, Burge doubled, Peters and Rucker singled for the final two runs to make it a rout.

Mrs. Selby Notes a Change in Betty And Attributes It to Her Paris Visit

By RUBY M. AYRES.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

When Derek Challenor, stodgy English landowner, sees dainty Stella Dawson playing a small part in a suburban theater, he forgets his vow not to marry again. Imposing Narrow Lane Hall deprecates his young bride but she is happy after her baby is born until the Challenor tradition puts little Elizabeth in charge of the house. Seven unhappy years make the open adoration of Pip Hulbert welcome. When divorce looms, Stella pleads with Derek for Betty. He refuses and after she marries Pip, Betty is killed in an accident when Elizabeth is 16 and Stella is inconsolable. While on a bus trip a year later Elizabeth meets Kim Lawless when she wanders into his wood to pick primroses. He says he hopes she comes again despite the sign warning trespassers. Derek dies, leaving half his wealth to Elizabeth if she quits her mother, and her stepfather Penelope can't understand her decision to remain with her mother. Penelope tells her she was to marry Lawless but he broke the engagement. Stella dies and Elizabeth lives with Penelope and their Aunt Thornley. She meets Lawless in the Selby's dance and then at their place in Somerset. Penelope becomes ill in Paris and as Kim drives her to Dover for the channel boat he tells her he loves her. Penelope calls for Kim in her delirium. She dies but loses her singing voice. As Elizabeth dines in London with Roy Selby he tells her Mrs. Desmond said Kim and Penelope were married secretly. Kim dances with her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXI

"Yes, I am married—married! Married! Married!"

Again her voice rose shrilly as it had risen that afternoon in Paris when she cried out Kim Lawless' name.

Elizabeth gave a little choking cry.

"Penelope!"

She stared at her sister with frozen eyes, and suddenly Penelope covered her face with her hands.

"I wish they had let me die," she said, with the quietness of despair. "Why didn't they let me die?"

Mrs. Selby glanced towards the open window with a frown on her pleasant face.

From the garden came a tumult of shrill voices and laughter, and presently a girlish form dashed across the lawn with Roy in hot pursuit. When they had passed out of sight, she said with a sigh: "I cannot imagine what has happened to Elizabeth. I never saw such an alteration in a girl! When she first came to the house I thought she was particularly unaffected and charming, but now—well, I am beginning to hope that after all Roy is not serious in his attentions, because I am sure she is incapable of making him happy."

She paused hopefully, but her husband did not raise his eyes from the newspaper until she said with a touch of exasperation: "Well, why don't you say something?"

He looked up then with mild surprise.

"My dear, what do you want me to say? The girl seems all right as far as I can judge. Young people are all a little wild, but they will get over it in time, and settle down as we did."

"As we did!" his wife retorted. "Did I ever rush all over the place in trousers? Did I ever call every stray man 'darling,' without expecting him to take it seriously?"

Mr. Selby chuckled.

"You probably would have done just that—had it been the thing at the time," he answered. "And, as a matter of fact, consider that trousers are distinctly becoming to Elizabeth."

"Becoming!" his wife echoed eloquently.

There was a short silence before she started again.

"Last night—when the Beasleys were here—I suppose you know they were playing the murder game until well past midnight! And without the slightest consideration for those unfortunates who were trying to sleep! I spoke to Roy this morning, but he only laughed and asked why I didn't stay up and join in the fun!"

"And why didn't you?" her husband ventured. "They seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely, though I must admit I heard one or two blood-curdling screams."

"Such nonsense!" Mrs. Selby protested. "Elizabeth tells me they were looking for Bingo, or whatever absurd name they have christened our alleged ghost."

"And did Bingo obligingly materialize?" her husband asked inquiredly.

"Of course not! I don't believe in ghosts, for one thing, and for another, supposing there are such things, is any self-respecting ghost likely to appear with such a pandemonium everywhere?" But, in spite of her matter-of-fact words, Mrs. Selby shivered a little. "If I believed in ghosts I should certainly not continue to live in this house," she added positively.

But Mr. Selby smiled, and with an impatient gesture his wife discarded her embroidery and went out into the garden.

She was not feeling at all happy, although she could not explain why.

She had been quite pleased when Roy and Barbara informed her that Elizabeth was to continue the visit which had been so summarily broken. She liked Elizabeth—or, rather, she had liked her—until a week ago, when a very changed and different Elizabeth suddenly descended upon the household and proceeded to play havoc with its cheerful respectability.

"It must be the effects of Paris," Mrs. Selby decided, as she stood in the sunshine, shading her eyes and trying to see what had become of her family.

"Roy!" she called. "Elizabeth! Barbara!"

A charming voice answered from somewhere.

"Coo-ee! Coo-ee!" And a pair of slim legs in rather baggy but perfectly cut, trousers suddenly came into view from between the branches of a tree, and Elizabeth's face, framed by leaves and tousled hair, peered down at her.

"Here I am, but don't tell Roy. He thinks I'm somewhere in the orchard."

Mrs. Selby stared up at her. "How ever did you get there?" she demanded.

Elizabeth laughed. "I swarmed up," she admitted. "Barbara tried, too, but she couldn't manage it."

"I should think not, indeed!" Mrs. Selby said firmly. "Barbara has far too much sense to risk breaking her neck."

"Oh, but she'd have liked to!" Elizabeth protested. "Only she couldn't!" Still, if you think I ought to come down—" And the slim body dropped gracefully from its precarious position on a swaying branch, and landed at Mrs. Selby's feet.

"Well, really!" the elder woman protested, but she was fully alive to the picture Elizabeth made.

In spite of the disheveled hair and flushed face—or perhaps because of them—she looked like some graceful nymph.

She pushed back her tumbled hair and glanced apprehensively across the garden for a sign of Roy.

"I think you had better come in doors and have a cool drink," Mrs. Selby said practically, and, against her will, for she was a kindhearted woman, she remembered the stories she had heard of this girl's upbringing and her mother's history.

"I think you had better come in doors and have a cool drink," Mrs. Selby said practically, and, against her will, for she was a kindhearted woman, she remembered the stories she had heard of this girl's upbringing and her mother's history.

"Cheating!" he accused her with boyish approach.

"I like cheating," Elizabeth retorted.
